$500,000 FOR PONZI CREDITORS

10,000 HUB AND N. E. INVESTORS WILL GET WELCOME XMAS GIFTS

Ten thousand Ponzi creditors in Boston and New England will receive $500,000 or more, as a bit of a Christmas gift within the next few weeks, it was promised today in Federal District Court by Martin Witte, counsel for the Ponzi receiver.

The half a million dollars will be doled out to the 10,000 creditors as an additional 5 per cent. paid on their claims, making a total of 15 per cent. they will have received back out of the wreck of the Ponzi enterprise of half a dozen years ago.

It is believed the 5 per cent. payments will have been made before Christmas.

Attorney Witte in his report to Jud. Morton stated that he had disposed of between 7,000 and 8,000 cases against persons who made a profit out of the Ponzi bubble, and that he had collected through these

'BUD' STILLMAN GIVES FIANCEE $25,000 RING

New York, Oct. 7.—On a work-roughened hand that has never known gem or jewelry a $25,000 diamond and emerald engagement ring will glitter and gleam when Lena Wilson, servant-girl fiance of "Bud" Stillman, comes to New York from the Canadian woods.

Already the ring has been purchased and has been stowed away in a place of safety by "Bud," son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stillman of divorce court and, later, reconciliation fame.

For two days Mr. and Mrs. Stillman scoured the jewelry shops in New York to find a perfect ring to fit the perfection of their son's intended bride, servant in his mother's Canadian lodge.

WARRANT IS ISSUED AGAINST ENWRIGHT

A warrant charging criminal libel was issued today against Frederick W. Enwright, Boston publisher, by Judge Sullivan in Municipal Court upon application of former Mayor James M. Curley, who fought with Enwright in State street three days ago because of statements published by the latter.

A cartoon of Curley in a jail cell with a ball and chain attached to his ankle was described by counsel as the cause of the action against Enwright and Judge Sullivan remarked that it was the ball and chain, "which probably put beyond the truth," that led him to issue the warrant.

Service of the warrant on the publisher will be made, according to an

CARBUNCLE SENDING T. R. JR. TO HOSPITAL

Chicago, Oct. 7.—(A.P.)—A carbuncle on the neck of Theodore Roosevelt has become so serious as to compel an operation at once and Mr. Roosevelt will leave for New York today after speaking at Elkhart, Ind., to enter a hospital, the Republican congressional campaign committee was notified today.

Mr. Roosevelt left Chicago today for Elkhart, but took a physician with him to care for the growth after refusing that he submit at once to an operation. He will arrive in New York tomorrow. Arrangements are being made there by Congressman John O. Tilson of Connecticut to take him to a hospital at once.

The carbuncle first troubled Mr. Roosevelt several days ago while he was going from Cincinnati to Evansville, Ind., to speak. He abandoned his Evansville engagement and came to Chicago for medical care, later going to Minnesota for two addresses. Today the ailment became more painful.

Washington, Oct. 7 (I.N.S.).—The Byrd North Pole plane hopped off from Bolling Field for New York this afternoon on the first lap of its round-the-country tour to demonstrate the possibilities of commercial aviation.

Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd was at the controls. From New York onward, Floyd Bennett, who made the North Pole flight, will pilot the ship.

The trip is being financed by the Guggenheim Aviation Foundation. W. P. MacCracken, air secretary of the Commerce Department, and Harry Guggenheim, were among the passengers.

FINDS JOBLESS MAN NEAR DEATH BY GAS

John J. Gamble, 56, was found unconscious today in his gas-filled lodging house room in Mattapan street, Mattapan. Mrs. Josephine A. Porter, a neighbor, smelling gas entered Gamble's room by smashing a window and found the man unconscious.

At City Hospital his condition was declared critical. Police say he had been out of work because of ill health had been receiving aid from a brother, and when a check failed to arrive, became despondent and tried suicide.

1 DIES, 1 SHOT, IN R. I. BATTLE

Bristol, R. I., Oct. 6 (A.P.).—One man was killed and a companion, said to be an amateur boxer from Fall River, was wounded in a fight late last night involving half a dozen young men and a restaurant proprietor.

Anton E. Maderios of No. 178 Columbia street, Fall River, suffered a bullet wound close to the heart and died almost instantly. The police said Joseph Bruno, the restaurant keeper, told them early today he fired the shot that killed Maderios.

James Fargoss of Fall River was shot through the left arm. All those involved in the affray were held.

BROWNING REPUDIATES 'PEACHES' IN N. Y. SHOPS

New York, Oct. 7.—Differences between the Brownings widened into a black, yawning canyon as Mrs. Catherine Heenan, mother of "Peaches" Heenan Browning, decided to end her game of "hide and seek" with Edward W. Browning and take her daughter today as far as possible from the millionaire realty operator's "influence."

Browning acted meanwhile to cut off "Peaches" from the luxurious life she enjoyed as his wife. Learning that "Peaches" had ordered $200 in finery from a Fifth avenue store, charged to him, he wrote to leading shops he would not be responsible for bills.

DALEY, CRIMSON LINE STAR ILL; COADY OUT

Harvard football prospects received another hard blow today when Leo Daley, regular guard, was taken to Brooks Hospital, Brookline, for observation for appendicitis.

The loss of Daley for the important game with Holy Cross Saturday will leave a gap in the Crimson line which Coach Arnold Horween will find it difficult to fill. Captain Coady, another stalwart lineman, also will be unable to start against Holy Cross, because of injuries suffered in the game with Geneva last Saturday.

Horween had shifted Daley into Kilgour's place at right guard and had announced he would be in the starting line-up against the Crusaders.

Daley is a senior and has played two years on the varsity eleven. He was regarded as one of the best of the Crimson forwards.

At Brooks Hospital, at noon, it was said Daley was was suffering pains in his right side and that it was feared an operation would be necessary.

The loss of Jack Turner and Jon Crosby through scholastic ineligibility last week and the defeat by Geneva, in the opening game Saturday, are other links in the chain of hard luck that Fate has built for the Harvard eleven this year.

Ford's Plan for Boys

MR. GREEN, able, conservative and respected head of the American Federation of Labor, was invited to speak before the Young Men's Christian Associations in Detroit, then told that his speech could not be delivered in that institution. Labor leaders were asked to speak from various Detroit pulpits, then told the churches did not want them.

THERE MAY be good reasons for these sudden changes. But Christ, who drove the money changers from the Temple, might be surprised to see His modern representatives driving laboring men from the pulpits.

It looks, according to the union man, as though money changers were "on top" once more.

MR. BORAH is as dry as the spot in Sahara farthest from any oasis. But he will help to re-elect Senator Wadsworth of New York, who believes that prohibition has no place in the Constitution, as the fathers planned it.

Senator Borah thinks it more important to keep the Senate Republican, and himself regular, than to rebuke wetness.

HOWEVER, that is not the news that interests this great country. The New York baseball team won yesterday, and Babe Ruth, idol of youth and old age, made three home runs in one game, breaking all records, for all time.

The pennant race stands two

CHARMING SCOTCH LASSIE OF THE WILDS WON HEART OF STILLMAN

ROMANCE OF CANADIAN WOODS AND PARK AVENUE LATEST EVENT IN RICH STILLMAN FAMILY

MAID NOW, SHE'LL JOIN SOCIETY

"Bud" said today in describing Lena exultingly.

Real boy all the way through even if he has now reached his majority, young "Bud" was almost dancing with excitement as he described his woods romance with the Scotch lass, daughter of a Canadian trapper and "voyageur."

"We plan to marry in the Spring, after my graduation from Princeton," Bud said in the brief summing of his romance that has run now for eight years or more.

"My little wood daughter" and "My little daughter of the bush," is the way in which "Bud's" mother, Mrs. Anne U. Stillman, indicates that she has taken the shy forest lassie into her heart.

Both Bud's mother and father are delighted with his choice of 18 year-old Lena, whose home from a three-room shack nestling in the lee of the Stillman grand lodge at Grand Mere, Quebec, will become a sumptuous Park avenue apartment next June.

MOTHER DELIGHTED.

"I am delighted with Bud's choice," Mrs. Stillman declared in the lodge that is well back from the cose of city life in the Canadian woods.

"I had often wondered why Bud had not noticed this nice little girl. At last, however, he woke up.

"I was passing a few days down in New York when Mr. Stillman and I received a wire from Bud asking us to get him a ring for Lena. I was a little at surprised, but I was delighted. Mr. Stillman and I shopped for two days for this ring.

"It is a beautiful jewel, but not more beautiful than the jewels that Lena possesses—and by that I refer to her wonderful character.

"Mr. Stillman is as pleased with Bud's choice as I am. He said when I told him of the wire, 'We will buy the nicest ring we can find.' He has not met Lena yet, but he will soon, for I shall bring Lena to New York with me shortly. She will pass the Winter there.

"She loves music and this Winter we are going together to attend the opera and concerts in New York."

Lena walked into the room of the lodge at this point, for she has relinquished her post as a servant and now is one of the Stillman family, in spirit, if not quite in name.

GOING TO OPERA

Affectionately Mrs. Stillman, who herself regained peace and, happiness only a few months ago and after years of distressing divorce court procedure, patted the girl's hand as she sat down.

"We're going to the opera and concerts in New York, aren't we, Lena?" she repeated.

"Yes," the girl of the forest replied, shyly. "I hope so."

"Lena was delighted with the ring, but she doesn't know much about the value of such things. But I has put it with our family jewels in New York, but Lena will wear it in the city during the Winter. We never keep any jewelry up here. It is hardly the place for such things."

What Mrs. Stillman didn't say was that the ring, an exotic thing carrying an emerald and a diamond cut in a square, cost in the neighborhood of $25,000—a sum never before dreamed of by the simple child of the Canadian wilds.

Some time before November 15, according to Bud' — incidentally, his given name, but one which few of his friends would recognize, is James—the sturdy, cherry-cheeked Lena, with her blonde beauty, will come to New York, where a vista of a far different type will be unrolled before her eyes.

Never before has Lena been in settlement larger than a woods town, by such is the calm and poise of the girl whose ancestry is sturdy Scot that she is expected to adapt herself to her new environment without difficulty.

SOCIETY OPEN TO HER.

Then again, the doors of society will be opened to her, without reservation, as a marriage kin to the Henry P. Davisons, the William G. Rockefellers and others of those who dwell on the peak, and who walk in marble halls.

No romance of rosier hue has so excited society in New York as the romance of the freckle-faced "Bud" Stillman. A romance, born in the wild tangle of forest through which the St Maurice River winds in its rush of rapids near the Stillman lodge at Grand Alsne. It has a truly sylvan setting and one to fire the imagination.

As "Bud" himself described it calmly:

"I met Lena in Canada when I first went up there seven years ago. She lives in the next house to mother's place. I spent this Summer up there and saw Lena just before I came down from Canada. Lena, you know, works in my mother's place, and it was there that I met her."

As simple as that—"Bud's story. But back of his simple narration are a number of years of skillful manoeuvering by his sister Anne Stillman now Mrs. Henry P. Davison, to throw him in the company of the sturdy Scotch lassie when her work at the lodge was done and she was free to roam the woodlands.

Anne admired greatly the girl who was out working because her father, the trapper, guide and woodsman, had died, leaving hardly anything tangible with which to battle life and hack out a living.

House and servant work in the Canada woods are not rated on the humble scale that is the lot in cities such as New York. Lena was earning a living, and she was endearing herself to the hearts of the entire Stillman household—except the heart of "Bud."

"BUD" AND HIS MOTHER

Lena Wilson, fiancee of Young Stillman, of Grand Anse, Que., was Mrs. Stillman's maid, but the fond parent is enthusiastic over the engagement. She describes the ring as costing $25,000.

ENGINEERED MATCH

Mrs. H. P. Davidson (Anne Stillman), sister of "Bud," and her police dog Faust.

BRIDGED BY LOVE

Young Stillman will wed his North woods girl in the Spring. She will go from the lowly cot to the New York mansion, recently purchased by his parents for $600,000.

BLESSED BY PARENTS

'WETS' CUT ALL PARTY LINES

proved by the executive committee the league declares the only question before the voters is, "Am I wet or dry?"

A frank appeal to its membership of 4000 for "a very considerable sum of money" to enlarge the organization, for publicity work, and to send speakers throughout the state, is made.

Never have the prospects of being able to "accomplish something to remedy the intolerable and disgraceful conditions brought on by the Volstead law" been so bright, the members are advised.

"We believe," the letter to the voters reads, "that prohibition is a failure, and that there is no power in the government of the United States that can make it successful.

"We believe that we should work for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the complete restoration of local self government to the several states.

"We believe that unremitting exposure of the weakness of prohibition will bring about the repeal of the amendment and the Volstead law.

"The real question for each voter this year is, 'Am I wet or dry?' And the proper step for all wet voters is to cast their ballot for wet candidates (of any party) who may be trusted to work for the ends we desire."

Democratic candidacies, and especially that of Colonel Gaston, is based to profit from the disaffection within the G. O. P. ranks over the wet issue. Significant is the fact that the League's treasurer is Alexander Lincoln, defeated in the three-cornered contest for the Republican nomination for attorney-general.

The vice-presidents of the organization are Rufus B. Dodge and Dr. Charles M. Green. The long list of directors contains such names as Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, C. W. Barron, Richard Dell, Boardman, Julian Codman, Dr. William M. Conant, Ralph Adams Cram, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Herbert Parker, Francis Peabody, James J. Phelan, A. L. Nickerson, Dr. Frederick C. Shattuck, C. Clipston Sturgis, Mrs. Stratford Wentworth and Alexander Whiteside.

CUPID SETS NO LIMIT ON AGE

"A man is as old as he looks" said Henry L. Rand, wealthy 64-year-old widower, and president of the Boston Petroleum Company, after filing intention today, to wed Miss Dorothy Pearson, 37, of Wampatuck road, Dedham.

Rand who is also an expert accountant, lives at No. 49 Kirkland street, Cambridge. The wedding will take place next week.

"I did not even think of the difference in our ages" said Mr. Rand, "and I doubt if Miss Pearson did. Age does not matter in an affair of this kind. have known Miss Pearson for many years. She recently returned from California.

PETER FANEUIL RETURNS HERE

"Peter Faneuil," founder of the Cradle of Liberty and the now famous market, returned to Boston today after an absence of 200 years.

He was greeted at City Hall by Mayor Nichols and afterwards made a tour of inspection of the Faneuil Hall Market and the Cradle of Liberty.

"Peter's return to the Hub was on the occasion of the Century Celebration of the Faneuil Hall Markets for an accounting of his legacy to the city and to see how his institution has fared during this 100 years.

Richard F. O'Neil, dressed in the garb worn a century ago, portrayed "Peter Faneuil." Motion pictures were taken for educational and pictorial purposes.

COURT ALLOWS CURLEY'S WARRANT FOR ENWRIGHT

agreement by counsel, tomorrow, at 10 a. m., in Municipal Court by Police Inspector John A Dorsey. Enwright will then face the court for arraignment.

After a lengthy court session at the warrant hearing, with Enwright and the ex-Mayor and a score of friends on each side of the courtroom, Judge Sullivan asked Attorney Michael Sullivan of Salem, counsel for Enwright:

"In this cartoon of Mr. Curley with the ball and chain on his ankle, doesn't that in itself go beyond the truth and constitute sufficient evidence for me to issue a warrant?"

"We cannot prove, and do not claim, that Mr. Curley had a ball and chain on his ankle when in jail," replied the attorney.

The warrant was then issued.

Attorney Sullivan pleaded in vain for a lengthy hearing at a later date at which the question of a warrant could be thoroughly thrashed out, saying:

"We would like to bring out all the facts that led up to the street fight that occurred a few days ago, when Mr. Curley struck Mr. Enwright without provocation, and that also led to the matter now before the court."

The publisher with Charles Brickley, who was present when the fist fight with Curley took place, and other friends was first to arrive in the courtroom, crowded with spectators eager to see the first meeting of Enwright and Curley since the fracas.

A minute later Curley and a host of friends arrived and sat down on the opposite side of the courtroom from Enwright and his followers. Curley was represented by former Assistant District Attorney A. C. Webber.

Attorneys Sullivan, Webber and Inspector Dorsey stepped to the bench and began a conference, speaking in low tones. Enwright joined them a moment later and then Curley, not to be outnumbered in the conference, stepped quickly forward. Others followed, taking their places between the two principals, and the hearing that followed took place close to the bench.

"Everybody has agreed that the issue of Mr. Enwright's paper for October 5 is the basis for this action," explained Attorney Sullivan. "We desire an extended hearing, preferably on next Saturday.

"I know that it is not the practice of this court to grant extended hearings on applications for warrants, but this is an exceptional case. Mr. Curley is a man in public life and an avowed candidate for public office. There has already been some trouble in one of the principal streets of this city between these two well-known men.

"As regards that encounter, Mr. Curley has since claimed to be the victor, but let me say that that attack by him on Mr. Enwright was wholly uninvited and unprovoked.

"I do not see that this cartoon, on which the claim of libel is based, was in reality libel. No one was responsible for that cartoon but Mr. Enwright, but if it is a provable fact that the statements under the cartoon are true, that might offset the claim of libel.

"For these reasons we believe a full hearing should be granted, in order that all the facts may be brought out—all the facts that led to the cartoon and the statements under it."

Judge Sullivan had a copy of the cartoon in his hand. Looking up from it, he said: "In this cartoon of the ball and chain, doesn't that in itself go beyond the truth and constitute sufficient evidence for a warrant?"

Attorney Sullivan: "I thought that was a liberty the press had."

Judge Sullivan: "It seems to me that the ball and chain had a tendency to hold Mr. Curley up to ridicule. Holding up to ridicule in the proper way is one thing. But putting a ball and chain on his ankle is a different matter."

Attorney Sullivan: "We cannot prove and do not claim Mr. Curley had a ball and chain on his ankle when in jail."

Judge Sullivan: "I will issue the warrant."

cases somewhat more than $500,000 to swell the assets of the estate.

Total proved claims against Ponzi, according to Wiltz, amounted to more than $10,000,000 and a number in excess of 10,000 throughout New England satisfied the court of their validity as creditors.

Many investors against whom judgments had been entered as having made illegal profits out of the financial scheme did not comply with the court decree, Wiltz stated.

These judgments, he asserted, would be sold to banks or collection agencies at a discount on their face value, thereby providing additional liquid assets which may increase still more the amounts available to the creditors of the estate.

Yesterday the American and Advertiser gained 129 classified ads over the corresponding day of last year.

FEAR QUEEN MENACES 'STYLE'

Goes on Shopping Splurge as Son Parades With Hole in His Sock

Paris, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Queen Marie of Rumania has bobbed hair, but she will not wear short skirts.

She has been adamant to the entreaties of the high priests of fashion that she accept without alteration their modes, and they are fearful lest the great publicity given her views as to dress may have an effect on the styles for the season and upset all their calculations.

Marie continues to inject her own ideas into most of the costumes she is ordering. Meanwhile, however, the work of filling the rows of trunks lining the hallway outside her suite at the hotel is proceeding rapidly. Most of the royal purchases have been costumes for formal occasions.

There constantly are arriving frocks, evening dresses and coats to await final inspection by Queen Marie before acceptance. Princess Ileana accompanies her mother on all her shopping expeditions, which keep them on the go from morning until night.

Prince Nicholas, however, seems to have forgotten all about purchasing neckties, collars and other things needed for the trip across the Atlantic. He is absorbed in his passion for automobiles and spends most of his time in the showrooms of the leading makes of cars. He even got into the Automobile Salon which opens today, while workmen still were putting up booths, and it seems evident he will spend the rest of his stay in Paris there.

Some amusement was given persons on the boulevards when Nicholas was strolling along and they noticed that he had quite a hole in the heel of one sock which showed plainly above his shoe.

The Queen had as a tea guest Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, having dazzled the world with her tennis, now sets about making it giddy with smart "class." She's all dolled up in a cloak of brocaded metal cloth trimmed in rabbit fur, and a green beaded georgette evening gown—which, by the way, you cannot see.

10,000 YEARS OF PULPIT SERVICE GIVEN BY B. U.

Daniel L. Marsh, president of Boston University, quoted statistics to show that the B. U. Theological School has given 10,000 years of pulpit service to the world, when speaking at a luncheon of the Boston Rotary Club.

$50,000 IS LEFT TO WIDOW

One Niece of Churchman Gets $25,000, Another and Nephew $20,000

Bequests of $50,000 and all household furnishings and automobiles to the widow, $25,000 to a niece and $20,000 each to another niece and a nephew are provided in the will of Dean Edmund S. Rousmaniere of St. Paul's Cathedral, filed today for probate.

Dean Rousmaniere died September 26 at his home, No. 56 Chestnut street. The next of kin are named as Mrs. Sophie K. Rousmaniere, the widow; Mary E. Rousmaniere and Frances H. Dewing, nieces, and John E. Rousmaniere of New York, nephew.

Miss Mary Rousmaniere, who lives with the widow at the Chestnut street address, is the niece to whom the larger bequest is made.

The will gives $1,000 each to the three children of John Rousmaniere and the three children of Mrs. Dewing.

Gifts of $5,000 each are provided for Donald B. Aldrich, Henry K. Sherill and Margaret C. Estabrook, all of Boston, while $2,500 goes to Standish Howland of Providence.

John W. Sitter, Jr., Charles R. Pack, Allen W. Clark, Niles Carpenter, Roland W. Coates and Malcolm M. Restell, all of Boston, receive $500 each.

Two trust funds of $25,000 are left the Bata Street Trust Company and the income of these is to be paid to Frederick J. Walton and Henry Goddard. At their deaths, the principal sums will revert to St. Paul's Cathedral.

This baby is worth $9,000. What would a clock like it—but grown!—cost? It's filled with diamonds, and is on exhibition in Boston at the jewelry store of the Thomas Long Company. Miss Edna Moore is fearful lest she lose it in her eye.

BOSTON DAY AT BROCKTON FAIR

Brockton Oct. 7.—Today is Boston Day at Brockton Fair always the biggest attendance day each year. With fair weather it is estimated 75000 persons will attend.

Despite the rain there was a good attendance the third day of the fair. Everything went off as per schedule, except the horse racing. The track was the muddy. But most of the shows were put on and the balloon ascension took place. The Norse show program was carried out in full.

MAN PINNED AGAINST BUILDING BY AUTO

Patrick J. Flaherty of No. 14 Washburn street, South Boston, had a narrow escape from serious injury when he was pinned against a building at Dorchester avenue and Howell street by an automobile

'RED' SYNNOTT SAVES GIRLS

Frank ("Red") Synnott, widely known Hub hockey player demonstrated his skill when, early today, he saved two women from attack by a big muskrat in Neponset street, Back Bay.

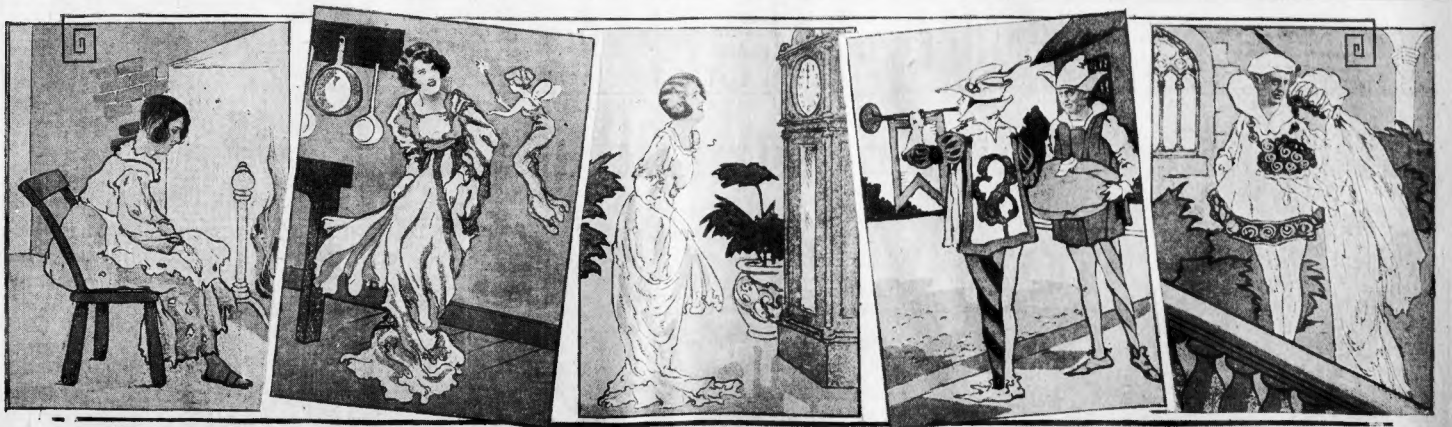
Another who played part in the fight was Policeman John Crowley of the Back Bay station.

Crowley, by a long range toss of his club stunned the rat.

Recovering from the blow, the rodent leaped into the automobile of "Red's" companion, Morey Landers of No. 98 Woodrow avenue, Dorchester, and then bolted out of it.

"Red" borrowed the policeman's nightstick and between rushes, dribbles and whatever else is known in the game of hockey made short work of the rat.

PRINCE CHARMING HAD BETTER PAGE THE FAIRIES AGAIN OR HE'LL HAVE AN EMPTY CINDERELLA SLIPPER!



The modern Cinderella sat before the fire of imagination, wishing for a Charming to buy Rolls Royces and such.

Fate, the "Fairy Godmother," and Father Time, brought "Bunny" Browning, an aged swain with young ideas.

Midnight struck, however, on discordant chimes, and the modern Cinderella "beat it," as the classics have it.

"I love my Peaches," wailed Prince Charming, and went forth in the highways to finds her. So, dear friends—

It MAY end even as the fairy stories of childhood, in the good old "happy forever" way. You never can tell.

MAN IS DYING AFTER FALL

Striking his head on the sidewalk as he collapsed with an attack of illness, Joseph Jurkiecz, forty-four, of No. 111 Fifth street, East Cambridge, is in a critical condition at the Municipal Hospital, suffering with a fractured skull.

He was removed from the sidewalk in front of 825 Cambridge street in the ambulance of the East Cambridge station that was called to the scene by a passerby. His name was immediately placed on the danger list.

AUTOS KILLING 16 A DAY IN BIG U. S. CITIES

Washington, Oct. 7—(A.P.)—Deaths from automobile accidents in 78 of the principal cities of the United States totaled 4,143 during the first 36 weeks of 1926. This is an average, the Commerce Department reported today, of more than 16 deaths a day and is equivalent to an annual death rate of 18.9 for every 100,000 persons.

There was a considerable variation from month to month in fatalities. Starting with 431 in January, the total fell to 347 in March, increased to 549 for four weeks ended June 19, was lower for the next two periods and increased to 650 in the month ended Sept. 11.

Kansas City, with an estimated population o 117,000, had the lowest mortality rate per 100,000, with only one fatality for 36 weeks, city race.

while Indianapolis was highest, 59 fatalities for a death rate of 23.3.

OFFERS $500 REWARD IN KLAN LETTER FORGERY

Indianapolis, Oct. 7 (I.N.S.).—A reward of $500 was offered at noon today by Mayor John Duvall of Indianapolis for any information as to the identity of the person who, the mayor charges, forged the letter purporting to have been written by Duvall to D. C. Stephenson, incarcerated former dragon of the Klan.

The letter, made public by Thos as H. Adams, Vincennes publisher, tells of Duvall's alleged agreement to swap city appointments for Stephenson's support in the mayoralty race.

SECRETARY TO BE MADE HEIR

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 7.—Won by his charming personality and even temperament, Philip Ainsworth Means, Stockbridge (Mass.), millionaire has filed legal papers for the adoption of Carrol Gates Alton, 23, his secretary.

Means is a bachelor. Carroll entered his employment last year as his secretary. They will tour Europe within a few weeks if the adoption papers are approved in time and Means plans to leave his new heir a large sum of money.

'PEACHES' REPUDIATED BY 'DADDY' IN N. Y. SHOPS

about $100 was shattered when Mrs. Heenan in an interview with the Boston Evening American laughingly remarked:

"Babe's pocketbook is well filled."

Detectives and a lone newspaper reporter kept watch early today on Mrs. Heenan's apartment at No. 600 West One Hundred and Fifty-seventh street, in the expectation she might return to pack up for a long trip. With the exception of a few suit cases all the belongings of mother and daughter are in the apartment.

"'Peaches' thought it "lots of fun fooling the public," Mrs. Heenan said, in hiding since she left Browning. Mrs. Heenan said:

"I want to get Babe beyond the psychological reach of Mr. Browning. He is trying, through the press, to exert his influence over her to get her back in his possession with his promise of city and country homes for her. This is one of his many promises he will never fulfill. Babe will only get the proper rest when she is far away from his influence.

"She needs physical rest; but more than that, she needs mental rest. He will not try his firm persuasion on her now that she is under my wing.

"How can he care for Babe when he thinks more of himself than anything else? He would call Babe selfish.

"His sordid selfishness appears when he wants to flaunt her youth against his age, just to flatter himself before a morbid public.

"She has been a bird in a cage. Well, I've set the bird free. No, I won't let Babe talk, because I am protecting her as any mother would. Gossips cannot say she is doing anything undignified by remaining silent. She is bearing her own cross gracefully.

OLD AGE INSECURE.

"Old age is too insecure for lasting happiness, I told Babe, and she believes me now. We will go away in search of health. She may have lost many things, but no one can say hope has been taken from her. She is cheerful and happy now. I have read the papers, yes, and it has been said that I was jealous. I admit mother love, yes, but that is all. I have no personal quarrel with Mr. Browning.

"How could Mr. Browning be interested in the things Babe is? The difference in years is so great that it would be expecting too much of him.

"No, Babe will not mope or mourn, because her experience has taught her that oportunity awaits. I know she will make the most of it. She is not out of money, but her moments will be golden ones, enriched as they are by all she has been through.

"No, I will not let Babe talk. Silence on her part will do no harm. People may even think better of her. Babe's wounded heart will heal with true love. The sympathy for her that has been shown by so many has gratified her. Probably she will write her true story for others some day."

TO SUE FOR $200,000.

The chief project of "Peaches" at present, it is reported, is to sue her millionaire husband, ti year sold, for $200,000. It is said she engaged counsel more than a week ago with this purpose in view.

"Peaches," coached by her mother, reported to be a keen business woman, is definitely out for the money, it appears. She is dickering to obtain a juicy theatrical contract, and she has already let the press know that the privilege of interviewing her is worth cold cash. She is ready to talk for money.

She also, it is reported, is quite willing to write the true story of her romance for a goodly consideration.

"Peaches" believes she must keep her public constantly in mind, and she is firmly resolved, whatever happens, never to go back to a job. The one-time $15 a week shop-girl asserts that the next move is up to her husband.

Francis C. Dale, counsel for Mr. Browning, is giving the public at large an inside glimpse of some of the troubles the silver haired husband of the youthful "Peaches" underwent.

Also Mr. Dale is framing a defense to the expected suit of "Peaches". One phase of his anticipation is that "Peaches" didn't tell the truth about her age when she was married.

SAYS SIMPSON USES 'FAKED' EVIDENCE

Somerville, N. J., Oct. 7.—Henry De La B. Carpender, wealthy broker, who with his cousins, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and her two brothers, Henry and "Willie" Stevens, has been indicted for the murders of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Alexander H. Mills, issued a statement through his attorney, Russell Watson, today.

In the statement he charges Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, with manufacturing evidence. He predicts that he will never be brought to trial and that his cousins will be acquitted. The statement reads, in part:

"The time of the murder has been definitely fixed as being between 10.15 and 10.20 on the night of September 14, 1922. As is well known at that time I was several miles rom Phillips Farm at the home of J. K. Rice. It is my firm conviction that Senator Simpson has determined not to try me with my cousins for the sole reason of endeavoring to deprive them of the proof that Mrs. Gibson committed perjury when she testified that she saw me at the scene of the murder.

"When I read the statement which Senator Simpson and his investigators were said to have obtained rom ex-State Trooper Henry L. Dickman, its wild recklessness did not surprise me because since Mrs. Gibson perjured herself at the Somerville hearing, I have believed that the prosecution would feel the need of manufacturing other evidence in an attempt to procure convictions.

"In the second place, Dickman is a deserter from the army, a self-confessed bootlegger, and now charged with a crime in this State.

"I have never seen Dickman or the late Prosecutor Beekman. I never was in Mr. Beekman's office, and I have never in my life paid or offered a bribe to any one."

The investigators turned their attention today to threatening letters said to have been sent to Mrs. Mills by a woman rival for the Rev. Hall's affections, shortly before the double slaying.

FAIR WEATHER RULES AS MERCURY DROPS

PROBE PARTY IN POISON DEATH

Hartford, Ct., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Noise, loud talking and music, which to their minds indicated guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brooks K. Parker, who with their five-year-old daughter, Helena, were victims of a mysterious poisoning Saturday, Mr. Parker and the child dying, have been reported to investigators by occupants of the apartment across the hall from that in which the tragedy took place.

This was as late as 10:15 Saturday evening, when Mr. Ziff, the neighbor, returned from work. He said the Parker apartment was brightly illuminated and the shades down. When he went to work at 4 o'clock Sunday morning he said the shades were raised and the lights out.

Mrs. Ziff said when she entered the Parker apartment as the victims were being taken out on stretchers, contrary to previous reports, Mrs. Parker was not unconscious.

SPENT $1250 TO BEAT O'BRIEN

William F. Foley of South Boston, victor in the free-for-all contest for the Democratic nomination for district attorney of Suffolk County, spent $1,250, his primary expense return filed today with the secretary of state disclosed.

The return of Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien, who lost the Democratic nomination and whose Republican nomination for the office is in doubt, spent $739.

Congressman John J. Douglass of East Boston reported his expenses as $1,358.61. Elliot Wadsworth, Republican candidate for a seat in the House, spent nothing.

RETURN FROM VICTORIOUS MONTREAL CAMPAIGN

ANCIENTS MARCHING UP CANAL STREET

High military honor was conferred upon the company from Boston by the Canadian military on their most successful field day in 50 years. Colonel Victor Tardit of the Sixty-fifth Carabiniers turned over his regiment to Major Malley of the Ancients in the march to the station in Montreal. CARS DROP INTO CANAL; 11 HURT

Olean, N. Y., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Eleven persons were injured, two possibly seriously, when a northbound passenger train on the Rochester division of the Pennsylvania Railroad hit a split rail and two coaches plunged into the water-filled bed of the abandoned Genesee Valley canal at Black Creek, two miles north of Cuba, N. Y., today.

Those seriously hurt are Jack Van Weigand, Olean, formerly an aviator, and Mrs. Anna Overlake, Newark, N. J.

They were taken to the Cuba Hospital for examination.

Henry Stern, Edward Farley, Willis Davis, Joe Roberti, Mr. and Mrs. William Ross, all of Newark, N. J.; Sam Tuso, Mount Morris, N. Y.; Bertrus Asrian, Canada, N. Y.; R. T. Brindle, Erie, Pa., were taken to the hospital, suffering from minor cuts and bruises.

The engine and baggage car stayed on the track, but the two passenger coaches overturned and slid down into the canal bed.

WHIM OF KING SAVES ROYALTY

Bucharest, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—A whim of King Ferdinand saved a whole boatload of royalty from injury or death.

With former King George of Greece, Prince Christopher of Greece and several of his nephews and a princess of Hohenzollern King Ferdinand was motorboating on the Danube. The King's entourage followed the royal boat in another craft.

Acting on the spur of the moment, King Ferdinand decided that he and the members of the royal party would take the boat occupied by his entourage. Hardly had the change been made when the engine on the royal launch exploded, injuring several servants and forcing the others to dive into the water. The King's party pulled the dripping servants to safety.

Announcement to this effect was made by Charles H. McGlue, chairman of the State committee.

HOT WAVE IN PARIS THREATENS FARMERS

Paris, Oct. 7.—France is sweltering under an unseasonable heat wave which threatens disaster to the farmer. For three months there has been no rain. The ground is so hard and dry that fall cereal sowings will be almost impossible unless there is a change before the November frosts.

The weather office says there is no rain in sight. The thermometer in Paris hovers between 75 and 80

ANCIENTS BACK IN BOSTON

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston returned to this city today.

Inspired by the memory of the most successful field day of the organization held in Canada in the last fifty years, the Ancients marched from North Station to the Faneuil Hall armory, where they were dismissed by Major C. A. Malley.

The departure of the famous local organization from Montreal was featured by the bestowal of a signal honor, the first time in the history of the Ancients that it has been received.

When the company left Montreal last evening they were escorted from the Mont Royal Hotel to the station by the Sixty-fifth Regiment Carabiniers Mont Royal, a territorial regiment commanded by Colonel Victor Tardif. In addition Colonel Tardiff turned over the command to Major Malley, and Lieutenant Harlow Trumbull and Lieutenant-Commander Lincoln Lothrop of the Ancients were invited to march with the colonel's staff.

The oldest member of the company to take part in the field day was Major George H. Morrison, a veteran of the Civil War, ninety-one years of age. The youngest was Lieutenant Robert A. Nagel, who is twenty-six.

CONSIDER APPEAL FOR BOY OF 15 SENTENCED TO DIE

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—An appeal is being considered by McDowell County Court in the case of Adam Burress, fifteen-year-old boy, under sentence to die October 9 for attacking a nine-year-old girl.

The only defense offered at the trial was the boy's age and mental condition. He had escaped from the State Reformatory, to which he had been committed for theft of a watch.

AGED MAN AND WOMAN KILLED

Two aged persons, a man and woman, were knocked down and killed in Boston by automobiles while crossing the street.

Samuel Rasovick, 75, of No. 26 Hansborough street, Mattapan, was struck in Blue Hill avenue, near Deering road, Mattapan, by an automobile operated by Frank J. Dailey of Windsor street, Allston. Dailey was held by the police.

While on her way to church Mrs. Catherine McGuire, 70, of No. 63 Forest street, Roxbury, was killed by a truck at Dunmore and Dudley streets, Roxbury.

BLIND STREET SINGER'S VOICE TO BE CULTIVATED

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Joseph M. Kimball, a blind street singer, will go to New York next Sunday to complete training his voice. He owes his chance to the Rev. H. L. Maunder, a Methodist minister, who, assisted by his congregation, financed the man's preliminary training.

They pledged $3,000 to permit Kimball to study for ten months under Franz Proschowsky, teacher of Amelita Galli-Curci.

FRAMINGHAM'S TUBERCULOSIS TESTS CITED

Washington, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Protection of school children and babies against tuberculosis was urged today as the most valuable method for controlling the ravages of that disease, by speakers at the twenty-second annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association.

Dr. Jabez H. Elliott of Toronto said the program must include isolation of far advanced cases in contact with children, examination of all children in contact with afflicted persons, frequent re-examination of all children of school age and even of pre-school age, and adequate treatment of all physical defects in childhood.

This system, he added, had reduced the tuberculosis death rate among children in Toronto from 216 per 100,000 to as low as 66 per 100,000.

Dr. Donald B. Armstrong described the health demonstration in Framingham, Mass., by which the death rate was reduced from 121 per 100,000 to 40 in seven years.

Delegates were told by Professor Friedrich Von Muller, University of Munich, of co-operation of art and science in a new method to discover tuberculosis in early stages. He said he was assisted by Adolf Busch, celebrated German violinist, through whose nicely attuned ear the various chest sounds were charted for interpretation with greater accuracy than hitherto possible, as they satisfied the basic note characteristic of the healthy lung. This was found to average 108 vibrations a second.

CANADA TO RE-ELECT LIBERAL MINISTERS

Ottawa, Ont., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Conservative political observers express the opinion that there probably will be no opposition by their party to the re-election of any of the Liberal ministers at the by-elections November 9.

The elections are made necessary by the formation of the Mackenzie King Liberal government. While no official announcement has been made, it is intimated that final decision will be left to the Conservative legislators in the various constituencies affected.

EUROPEAN BLOC AGAINST U. S., RUSSIA SEEN

Berlin, Oct. 7.—"Briand is endeavoring to build up a European bloc or coalition of France, Germany, Britain and Italy, capable of a stand against America on the one hand or hold in check Russia on the other."

That is the explanation given me by a high diplomat who has followed developments since the Locarno conference.

Germany, it was explained, must buy her admission into this bloc by disposing to America of some of her Dawes railway obligations. An imperative preliminary condition to Franco-German friendship for which the United States is expected to furnish the necessary cement in the form of dollars, is French ratification of the American debt settlement agreement.

"Thus this ratification is no longer merely a Franco-American problem," my informant pointed out. "It is now a European question."

The subject of the Chamberlain-Mussolini meeting is not as mysterious as the press has made it, according to my informant, who said:

"It is all a part of the same general plan. At Geneva Briand is reported to have told Sir Eric Drummond: 'I will take care of Stresemann, and Chamberlain will take care of Mussolini.'

According to this version, Briand asked Chamberlain to see Mussolini because he and Briand were in a difficult position and he could not well meet the Duce because of the tension between France and Italy, and because of the difficulty it would make for Briand in his own country.

More and more the impression is being created that a general European peace can only be bought with Uncle Sam's money.

TAXI DRIVERS ASKED TO ACCEPT WAGE CUT

Owners and m[illegible]ers of the T[illegible] Taxi Company and Cummings Brothers, controlling the Yellow Cab, desire drivers to either work a longer day or accept a cut in wages.

These changes in the existing contract with Taxi Drivers' Union, Local No. 12[illegible], were reported at a meeting of the local at [illegible] 924 Washington street.

It is understood that the owners want the drivers to work ten hours, instead of nine, or accept a cut from the existing pay of $4 a day to $3.50 a day for the nine-hour day.

TRAFFIC LAWS TO BE RIGIDLY ENFORCED

Drastic enforcement of the automobile traffic laws was ordered by superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley today, to be continued until automobile congestion has been relieved.

At the same time twelve new officers have been assigned to Captain James Laffey of the Back Bay traffic police for work in that section. They will do the same work as the thirty-five new patrolmen assigned to the downtown traffic station a few weeks ago, on Beacon street from the bridge to Kenmore square; Brookline avenue, Massachusetts avenue, Boylston street from Hemenway to Charles, Commonwealth avenue, Dartmouth, Marlborough, Stuart, Providence and Berkeley streets, St. James and Columbus avenues.

Superintendent Crowley's new order was made to all members of the department, and patrolmen were given logs with instructions to use them generously.

REVUE ATTRACTION AT OPENING OF CAFE

The Palais Royal, formerly Healey's, but now under new management, has engaged Sid Lorraine, New York producer, to stage a new revue for the opening celebration of the cafe tonight. Lorraine calls his show "The Scandals of the Desert" and brings a Broadway cast of dancing girls to surround his featured players, Agnes Dempsey, "Giggles" Leonard, Charlotte Allen and Al Sheek. Joe Rines and his dance orchestra will furnish the music for the shows as well as for the general dancing. It is also planned to have the entertainment broadcast from WEEI every Thursday and Friday night.

MAINE SELECTMAN IS FEARED DROWNED

Ellsworth, Me., Oct. 7.—Herbert Young, selectman and member of the school board of Hancock, is believed to have been drowned in the heavy storm. His 25-foot power boat, in which he left for a fishing trip, was found on the beach at Sullivan with the tender made fast.

It is believed that Young had trouble with his propellor, and while attempting to fix it fell overboard.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Miss Virginia Ayres Makes Formal Bow to Society Tomorrow at Parents' Cohasset Home

BRIDES AND WEDDING pageants, buds and debutants frivolities illumine the social horizon for the approaching week-end. Entertaining for the blithsome bud and entertaining for the happy bride-elect are the order of the day and evening.

MISS MARGARET KEEP WILLIAMS, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lombard Williams of Dedham, who'll rank high in pulchritude as a bride, is the centre of informal festal scenes. Miss Harriet Royce, of the bridesmaid staff, entertains tomorrow at luncheon for bride and attendants.

IN THE EVENING, at the Lombard William's home in Dedham is a supper party, with the bride-elect as hostess for her's and the bridesroom's attendants. The wedding itself will be a pretty ceremonial in pretty little St. Paul's, Dedham, a church associated with several marriages in the bride's family.

MISS ALICE LUCE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Luce of Boston and Cohasset, oversees the activities of a group of players who'll grace the Shailand Ayres dining room when Miss Virginia Ayres makes her formal bow tomorrow.

SISTER DEBUTANTE do the honors—the Misses Jessie Bancroft (she was presented last week), Helen Rust, Evelyn Royce, Helen Curtis, Esther Smith, Mary Hall, Elizabeth Moulton, Carol Rogers, Eleanor Perkins, Frances Meade and Emma Dickerman.

MRS. HENRY LEE HIGGINSON, 2d.
At the coffee tables at John the Baptist reception.

LATER IN THE SEASON Mr. and Mrs. Ayres will probably arrange a formal town function for their daughter. The debut party is a country festivity, at the pleasant seashore home of the family overlooking the waters at Cohasset.

TEAS AND LUNCHEONS are on the cards for Miss Elizabeth Trumbull, whose wedding in Salem on Saturday is a late afternoon affair in the First Church, when she becomes Mrs. Goddard May White.

MRS. FRANKLIN TRUMBULL of Cambridge, sister-in-law of the bride, gives a tea for her, and Mrs. Fanning Williams of Marblehead was hostess for a luncheon. Mrs. Walter Trumbull, Jr., feted the bride-elect with a luncheon also.

YOUNG MRS. HENRY LEE HIGGINSON 2d, bearer in the younger generation of a highly honored Boston name, is to assist at the coffee tables when celebrities of stage and society are guests of Leighton Rollins after the opening of John the Baptist.

THE PRESENCE among the guests of that venerable Boston matron, Mrs Henry Lee Higginson senior serves to give the occasion a cachet of distinction quite all its own. Mrs. Higginson makes very few appearances in the social world, of which she always has been a notable figure.

MISS ABBIE FARWELL BROWN, Miss Berthe Bragiotti, Mrs. Joseph W. Courtney Mrs. J. Weston Allen, Miss Hope Ladd, Mrs. John Abbott and Mrs. Edward L. Sturtevant also will pour. Miss Nancy Sturgis Vose and Miss Jessie Hayden head a group of assistants.

NEW YORK SENDS a coterie to this opening and reception. Mrs. John Alexander of Park avenue and Princeton, one-time president of the Drama League, comes over. Also, Mrs. John Jay White, one of the Colony Club's founders and hostess of an artistic salon. They will be at the Copley-Plaza.

GIFFORD PINCHOT, 2d; Ogden Goelet and William Faversham are expected to dash over from the Big City to be at the Repertory. The Repertory powers have also invited stars of the stage now in town, Miss Ina Claire, Miss Chrystal Herne, Otis Skinner and others of like lustre.

RARE AND BEAUTIFUL rugs, the collecting of which through months and years of search, and thousands of miles of travel, are the next important attraction to be especially shown at the Museum of Fine Arts in the Fenway.

THEY ARE the possessions of James F. Ballard, of St. Louis a part of his private collection. Mr. Ballard, known the world over as an authority and connoisseur, has spent twenty-five years in bringing this collection together.

ADVENTURES in plenty and lively experiences to fill a book have been his in his pilgrimages covering a good part of the world. For one treasure alone, an Indo-Persian Ispahan, Mr. Ballard searched the Near East and Orient, to find at last exactly what he desired in Bombay in the home of a Persian

All I do is "soak and rinse" on washday

—yet I get whiter clothes than ever

I NEVER used a soap that rinses out so quickly, and so completely, as Rinso does.

Best of all, the dirt and stains float off in the rinsing. I don't need to do the least bit of hard rubbing—or even boil the clothes, because Rinso not only whitens, but sterilizes, too!

My clothes last much longer this easy "soak and rinse" way because now I never have to scrub them threadbare over a washboard. Yet they are whiter, brighter than ever!

Rinso is all I need on washday. No other soaps, chips or powders. It makes the water so soft and suday. Just ask your grocer for

Rinso

The granulated soap that soaks clothes whiter—no scrubbing.

MAINE BISHOP HURT IN AUTO

Bangor, Me., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—The Right Rev. Benjamin F. Brewster of Portland, Protestant Episcopal bishop of Maine, suffered a slight fracture of the collarbone when an auto, in which the Rev. H. W. Plummer of Brownville Junction was driving him from Houlton to Brownville, skidded and overturned on the State road.

Bishop Brewster was given first aid at Mattawamkeag and brought to a hospital here. It was said he probably would be able to leave today for his home in Portland. The Rev. Mr. Plummer was not injured.

NAB DRAGON FOR WEARING MASK

Owosso, Mich., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—George E. Carr, grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan in Michigan, was arrested today, charged with violating the Michigan law which prohibits the wearing of a mask in public.

It is charged that Carr's features were masked when he marched in a Klan parade here last week.

Alfonso Back in Madrid

Madrid, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, traveling by special train, returned from San Sebastian today. Government officials and a large crowd greeted the monarchs at the railway station.

Boston Co-eds Are Too Busy for Petting

"The average college girl has a good reputation," and Wilfred O. Cross, Chicago seminarian, just wants to bask in the spotlight of publicity when he attacks their morals, girl students in Boston colleges declared today.

Continuing to defend themselves against the startling charges of the Chicago critic, they defied Mr. Cross to prove that gin drinking and "hot dates" are pastimes of the average college girl.

"Most all of us college girls enjoy a good time," said Mrs. Alma Benedict, student at Boston Business College. "We like to visit inns for dinners and parties, but as far as gin drinking and petting goes, there is nothing to it. The average college girl has a good reputation."

TOO MANY STUDIES.

"Present day college students have too many studies to think about instead of gin and petting parties," said Miss Dorothy Broomh, a student at the New England Conservatory of Music.

"Anything for publicity," was the answer of Miss Winifred Chase, of the Emerson School of Oratory. "The present day young man will do anything to be in the spotlight," she declared. "Cross is looking out for Cross only. All he wants is personal gain, so he comes out with an article and takes the college girls to task for their morals. The average college student has too much at stake to risk her reputation at gin parties."

MAKES HER LAUGH.

"Mr. Cross's article about those 'terrible college girls' makes me laugh," said Miss Bertha L. Fay of St. Stephen street. "This young man must certainly have been misguided, for he could not have gained his knowledge from personal experience. College girls are respected everywhere. This, of course, would not be true if girls thought of nothing else but gin and petting parties."

ENGLISH COAL MINERS REJECT PEACE PLAN

London, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—The government's latest attempt to settle the long-drawn coal strike has failed. A delegate conference of the Miners' Federation today unanimously adopted a resolution rejecting the proposals after the announcement of a district vote to that effect of 747,000 to 42,000.

The government proposals were contained in a letter sent by Premier Baldwin on September 17 to A. J. Cook, general secretary of the Miners' Federation. The principal point was an assurance that, if the miners returned to work they would be given governmental assistance in obtaining a nation-wide agreement, in effect if not in word. Such an agreement has been one of the main points demanded by the men.

SATIN MOTH MAY CAUSE BAR ON CONNECTICUT

New York, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Federal Horticultural Board will meet October 23 to consider the advisability of quarantining Connecticut because of discovery there of the satin moth. The insect, which is destructive to ornamental trees and plants, has been found in several other New England States which are now under quarantine.

BRITISH KNIGHTED FLIER JUST ESCAPES DEATH

Hinckley, England, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Sir Alan Cobham, noted English aviator, who recently was knighted after his triumphal flight from England to Australia and return, narrowly escaped death in a little Moth plane today. The aviator was making a forced landing when he barely missed high tension electric wires carrying 6,000 volts.

CANADIAN RUM SALE CONTROL DENOUNCED

Washington, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—The system of government control of liquor in Canada is a failure, the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church declared today in a long statement reviewing conditions in the Dominion since [illegible] prohibition in Quebec and other provinces.

The board explained that its conclusions were based upon a personal survey by Elmer A. Grant, its assistant research secretary, and upon government [illegible], newspaper articles and other material. It added that "only facts and figures of undoubted authenticity are used."

Summarizing the conclusions resulting from the survey, the board says:

"Government control in Canada has meant:

"An increased consumption of liquor.

"Greatly increased use of alcoholic liquors by young people and women.

"A swollen liquor bill.

"A great economic loss, which has halted prosperity and acted as a burden upon the general population.

"Increased vice and crime imposing upon the governments expenses which have burdened the taxpayers.

"A corruption hitherto unknown in Canada.

TWO WOMEN INJURED AS CARS CRASH AT LOWELL

Lowell, Oct. 7.—Mrs. Laura Nackey and Mrs. Martha Bloras, both of Lowell, were seriously injured as the result of a [illegible] at Bridge and West Sixth street.

Mrs. Nackey sustained lacerations of the face, injuries on her legs and possible fracture of ribs. Mrs. Bloras is injured on the head and has a cut over the left eye.

FORD CAPTAIN WILL RACE FOR A HADDOCK

Gloucester, Oct. 7.—To hell with the money. I'd race them for a haddock.

This was the way Captain Clayton Morrissey of the schooner Henry Ford received the word today that the winner of the Gloucester races starting Monday will be challenged by the winner of a Nova Scotia race just arranged between the champion Blue Nose and the untried Haligonian. The Nova Scotia race to decide the championship of the Nova Scotia [illegible] salt bankers will start [illegible]. The Gloucester races, from which the Haligonian withdrew at the last minute, will start Monday.

The contenders in the Gloucester races starting Monday are the Henry Ford, and the Columbia, captained by Ben Pine.

Because the Haligonian was given ample time to compete in the Gloucester races the committee here gave a luke warm reception to the news of the projected challenge. The financial problem is also a drawback, they pointed out, but Captain Morrissey was prompt to declare that money made no difference to him, and that he would race the Nova Scotia winner anywhere, anytime, off the [illegible] Georgia if they want to." He added, "I know Ben Pine feels the same way."

The Blue Nose is the champion fishing schooner of the North Atlantic. In view of the eagerness of the Gloucester captains it was felt here that despite obstacles the international race may become a possibility.

HUNDREDS MAROONED BY ILLINOIS RIVER FLOOD

Beardstown, Ill., Oct. 7.—(I.N.S.)—A new flood stage record was set here today when the Illinois river reached a stage of 25.6 feet, six inches higher than the crest of the devastating flood of 1922. Seven hundred additional acres of land are under water following the crumbling of the Kelly Lake levee east of this city. Misery and privation resulted here as the flood waters rushed into the city, tying up railroad traffic and causing serious breaks in gas, telephone, electric light and water mains. Hundreds are marooned by the rising waters.

MIDNIGHT SHOW WILL BE GIVEN AT WALDRON'S

A special midnight show will be given tomorrow night of "Lucky Sambo," the all-black burlesque show now playing at Waldron's Casino. The continuous hit, dancing and Southern melodies have made such a hit in Boston that the midnight performance was decided upon to give actors and actresses and others who might not be able to attend one of the regular performances a chance to see it. The show ran for weeks in New York, was recostumed and sent out on the road.

London, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—The Prince of Wales has mastered the Charleston and dances it well.

At a popular supper resort the prince danced the Charleston [illegible]. Observers said it was a pleasure to watch him and his partner, but the dancing of other couples was clumsy in contrast.

Those at nearby tables were surprised to observe when the supper bill was presented it was the prince who paid it, for royal personages rarely handle money.

PROBE DIVER IN AIMEE'S CASE

Los Angeles, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Efforts to obtain new evidence in charting the California-Arizona trail [illegible] by Aimee Semple McPherson during her absence from Angelus Temple occupied District Attorney Asa Keyes as he summoned more witnesses for the resumption of the evangelist's preliminary hearing today following [illegible]

Pending [illegible] of the [illegible] State witnesses Keyes [illegible] a desire to recount efforts of Fred Harrison, a deep sea diver, to recover the evangelist's body from Santa Monica bay, where she was thought to have drowned when she disappeared, May 18. Harrison died of pneumonia after several days of diving and [illegible] will be told by Robert D. Hunt, a fellow diver.

Keyes yesterday announced discovery of new evidence to prove his charge the evangelist was not kidnaped in the statement of two witnesses from Gila Bend, Ariz., who declare the evangelist passed through there in an automobile at the time she says she was [illegible]. The statements were obtained from F. Blevins, telegraph operator, and Frank Daly, freight agent for the Southern Pacific Railroad at Gila Bend.

Aimee Declares 'Kidnaping' Plot Was 'Satan's Master Stroke'

"Satan's master stroke," Aimee Semple McPherson, noted woman evangelist, calls her present predicament in Los Angeles, where she is accused to manufacturing a kidnaping story to cover up her absence, during which, it is alleged, she was with the radio operator of her million-dollar temple.

Bootleggers, the dope ring and others she links with Satan in his plot to destroy her, in her answer to the charges.

In colorful language in her magazine, "The Bridal Call, Four Square," under copyright of the Echo Park Evangelistic Association, Inc., she tells her version of the charges and explains her absence.

She depicts a meeting of Lucifer and one of his "princes of darkness" in which an abduction plot is hatched and declares that it was intended to ruin her church by discrediting her reputation.

The magazine article is a report by herself of her own speech in Angelus Temple to her followers. It is reproduced here in part.

By AIMEE SEMPLE McPHERSON

Satan's Master Stroke

"Speak! What is it?" commands Lucifer, bending forward anxiously.

"Oh, Lucifer, the worst news of all that I bring you is there is a church in Southern California that is almost as dangerous as all other churches put together.

This church has stood there for three and a half years and has a seating capacity of 5,300 people. It has done irreparable injury to the cause of Satan and brought defeat to the hosts of hell in countless ways.

"Over 34,000 have swept their way to the altars of this place and more than 12,000 have been bptized in water there. This thing is threatening the kingdom of Satan.

"Do you remember Mary Elizabeth Sullivan, queen of the dope ring, bound by you for twenty-six years? Well, she is there, saved and in the Bible School. And Joe ——, another dope addict—bound for twenty-thre years but not out of our clutches. Something must be done to stop this woman. What shall we do?"

Just "House of Cards"

"Woman? Woman, did you say?" asks Lucifer.

"Yes, a woman, mother of two children and an ordained minister of the Gospel."

Lucifer laughs long and loud.

"A little woman! You had me frightened for a moment. We'll fix her."

And so they draw closer together, talking earnestly in subdued whispers. The flames which burst out occasionally from the mouths of the fissures light the scene and reveal the cunning and satanic leers upon the faces of the Powers of Darkness. At last they rejoice; they have found a way.

"Let us prick the bubble of her reputation and the thing is done. But we must have human instrumentality. We shall choose others who will do it for us."

Bare False Stories

Satan then enumerates the possibilities of enemies made by this little woman in her fight against liquor, bootleg and dope, together with the dance hall and joy rides.

"It is a house of cards, take the pastor out of the church and it will fall," they say.

So they plan as night wears on and the world above lies wrapt in slumber.

There came a day when the little, tired minister of the Gospel, seeking refreshment beside a lovely sea, was quickly picked up and swept away into oblivion.

A sick call! How easy! An open door—a sudden shove—a motor roaring and wheels speeding away along the highway, with a little limp form in the bottom of the car.

"Ah-ha!" I seem to hear demoniacal laughter. "We have made it! That is not enough. We must bring in reports that she is here and there—and we must bring in positive identifications."

Then come the many conflicting stories.

"Shall we kill her? Shall we let her die? She is weak and broken now from so long a strain and living on canned goods, living a life of worriment and anxiety.

"But, no, we will reserve something far more cruel than that—something that will be far worse than death. We will have false witnesses seeing her here and there. Or we will take people who perhaps are honest in themselves but mistaken and influenced through our power. We will whisper in their ears and they will testify to having seen her."

Then comes her day of escape, whether intentionally permitted or not—that walk over the sands, weary and footsore, and the stumbling, almost unconscious, into a little village. And then the kind hands that picked up that little weary worker and brought her home.

Truth Rises Again

"Ah, is our work done now?" they ask Lucifer.

"No! that church is going on. They did not fall with the leader, for their leader was Christ. New members begin to flock in. The church is filled. In spite of all the things we can say or do the work is continuing and growing."

And praise the Lord: the work does still go on.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again."

"Halt, Lucifer!" the anger of Truth cries out. "You are to be bound with chains." Satan and his evil companions have been overcome—Truth has prevailed!

Old Lucifer, it may be that by calumny and slander and lying you will be able to disturb the hearts of God's children. But as sure as there is a God your days are numbered; Christ will triumph and right will gain the victory.

DEMAND BRITISH UNIONS VOTE ON STRIKE ISSUES

Scarborough, Eng., Oct. 7 (A.P.).—The Conservative party conference here today unanimously adopted a resolution urging a change in the trade union law to make the calling of a strike illegal without a secret ballot of the members of the union affected.

The law would also be amended to provide protection of trade union members from intimidation or victimization because of their political beliefs.

Adoption of the resolution comes as a result of pressure from party members for legal means to preventing such "lightning" labor movements as the recent general strike, in which the men were called out by their leaders without a strike poll.

For Head Colds

THERE are many ways to treat a cold in the head, but only one DIRECT way, and that is with vapors that can be inhaled.

The easiest and most satisfying way to get these vapors is to snuff a little Vicks VapoRub well up the nose, or melt a little in a spoon or tin cup and inhale.

The medicated vapors reach immediately into every corner of the air passages, soothing and healing with every breath.

For other forms of cold troubles just rub Vicks over the throat and chest at bedtime. It is then the body heat which releases these vapors.

SLAP IN FACE ANGERS SALM

Vienna, Oct. 7 (INS)—Count Slam Von Hoogstratten today is the centre of a new society scandal. His uncle, Count Erich Salm, recently filed suit against the monarchist leader, Prince Johann Lichtenstein for slander.

As a result one of the prince's adherents met young Salm on the street and slapped his face. A row ensued and now the count threatens suit against his assailant, whose name has not been made public.

Count Salm first gained fame, as far as America is concerned, when he wooed and won Millicent Rogers, New York heiress. They later were separated.

MANSTER HALL SCHOOL TO REPLACE LANDMARK

The late "Widow" Nolen's tutoring school at Harvard, famous for many college generations, will soon occupy a new three-story building of 28 classrooms at Holyoke and Mt. Auburn streets, where it will replace one of Cambridge's landmarks, a structure more than 175 years old, occupied by the Dunster House Bookshop.

In excavating for the new building, workmen found a brick basement floor three feet thick, indicating that the Charles River once was bordered by marshland extending nearly to Harvard square. The new building of the school, which is known as Manster Hall Tutoring School, will be of architectural design in harmony with new Harvard College buildings.

Many homesite developments now being laid out. Buy a lot and hold for future profits. See the Classified Ads for special offerings. Classification 79.

SON ADOPTED BY MILLIONAIRE

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 7—Philip [illegible] Means, New York millionaire sociologist, and a bachelor, has filed application to adopt [illegible] son, Carrel Gates Alton, 23, of this city.

Alton came to the attention of Means when he applied for the position of secretary to the archaeologist. Means was so pleased with his work that he has decided to adopt the young man and make him heir to the Means fortune.

PLAN BIGGEST POWER PLANT

Kiev, Ukraine, Russia, Oct. 7 (A. P.)—The Ukranian government today approved the plans of Hugh Cooper American engineer, for the construction of a 500,000 horsepower plant on the Dnieper River.

When completed, it is said, the plant will be the largest electric power station in the world, exceeding the output from Niagara Falls by fully 250,000 horsepower. It will supply the whole Ukranian region with current at a lower rate than prevails in any other country.

The Ukranian government today appropriated part of the funds for the initial stages of work and appealed to the central government in Moscow to supply the remainder. The entire enterprise must be formally approved by the Moscow government before work can be started.

Negro Pupil Admitted

Paris, Oct. 7 (A P)—A negro pupil has for the first been admitted to the higher Normal school for the first time in its long history. He is Lesire Blanche, a native of the island of Guadeloupe. He is 20 years old.

The tub's the thing!

Shaped right
Larger capacity
Keeps water hot longer
Strong cast aluminum
No seams to leak
No scouring necessary
Creates more effective water action

THE Maytag is the ONLY washer with a cast-aluminum tub—a tub cast in one piece of strong, thick aluminum! The Maytag tub keeps water hot for an entire washing! Keeps water clean because the dirt settles into the sediment trap beneath the gyrator!

Holds More Clothes

The Maytag tub holds more clothes than other washers—the capacity is 21 gallons instead of the usual 17. There is no machinery inside the tub to take up clothes space—the tub is all washing room! The quicker-washed pieces can be taken from the Maytag while it is running and passed through the handily-low, conveniently-placed wringer that instantly adjusts itself to a handkerchief or a blanket, and wrings both dry.

Tub Cleans Itself in 30 Seconds

After a washing is done, the Maytag tub automatically drains and cleans itself in 30 seconds. Nothing to scour or polish, no tiresome "cleaning-up" after a Maytag "wash-hour!"

More Cleansing Water Action

The scientific shape of the tub, together with the gyratator, produces a more thorough, more cleansing water action. Keeps the soapier, more turbulent water continuously active in every inch of the tub, all of the time!

Phone any authorized Maytag dealer listed below! Let him send a Maytag to your home to do a whole week's washing FREE! To prove to you how much easier, quicker, and more comfortable a Maytag "wash-hour" can be. Remember, if the Maytag doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

For homes without electricity, the Maytag is available with in-built gasoline motor

When in Philadelphia don't fail to visit the Maytag exhibit at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition. Exhibit D-4, Section 1, Palace of Liberal Arts and Manufacturers.

"Big Joe" 46 Years Without Vacation

Forty-six years without a vacation. Away from the job only two days in a month. Half a century healthy and still contented.

That is the story of Joseph "Big Joe" Sebastian of Chicago, a packer who refuses to be promoted above "the boys" he has worked with a long. Joe was away from work only a whole day, once. That was the day he got married. Take he took half days off to attend funerals.

Joe was discovered by W. S. Quinby, who went to Chicago to merge the Chicago branch of his coffee and spice business with the Beh-Conrad Company of that city.

Recently Joe packed single handed 5,000 pounds of coffee in one day. When offered the position of superintendent, he refused, saying he had been one of "the boys" too long.

The Secret Studio by Hazel Livingston

A Boston Story With a Charming Girl Heroine

Rosemary Merton, youngest daughter in a large Roxbury family, rebels at her poor surroundings and dreams of romance and luxury. She is attending college, but leaves and gets a job in a fashionable bookstore through a friend, Nina Clark. Nina takes Rosemary up the back stairs in the building to a studio occupied by a group of artists. They call it the Secret Studio. They hold a party and Rosemary attends with Larry Kane, one of the artists. Sunday, the next day, Rosemary and Larry go to the studio alone, where they are surprised by Sloan Whitney. She later meets Whitney and is attracted to him.

CHAPTER XXII.

"ISN'T that just what I guessed!"

"No, it isn't. No Indian officer stuff about Whitney. He was a second louie under me in France. Fine fellow, though. Could hold more cognac and cuss fancier than anybody I ever knew. We had some great old times . . .

"Well, he got his, finally, and I lost sight of him for a long time. I forget what it was got him, but he was in the hospital a long time. But it was a funny thing about Sloan. Never used to look at a woman—and now; oh, boy!"

"Why didn't he like girls, Larry?"

"I don't know. Something about his wife—love match an——"

"He's married?" Rosemary caught her breath. The words came tumbling out, surprising her with their intensity. She didn't care whether he was married or not. He could have a dozen wives for all the difference it made to her. And still—and still—

Larry's quick temper flared. "Will you let up on Sloan Whitney?" he cried. "I believe your're crushed on him!"

"I'm not! I don't even know him. Can't I ask a simple question without your jumping all over me?"

Larry beckoned the waiter and paid for the dinner.

They went out into the street and Rosemary's face was a heart-shaped

WOMEN UN FITTED FOR PULPIT, PASTOR SAYS

Women lack sufficient intelligence to take man's place in the pulpit or in other leading walks of life, Rev. Homer S. Morgan, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, said today, upholding the action of the West New Jersey conference in barring a woman candidate for the ministry on the ground that St. Paul said: "Let women keep silence in church."

Opposing this view, Rev. William D. Goble, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Cambridge, is firmly of the opinion that women who have the "call" should be elevated to the ministry. And, in his opinion, women are mentally equal to men.

"If a woman has a 'call' she should preach," said Rev. Mr. Goble. "It is against the Scriptures," said Rev. Homer S. Morgan, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church of this city.

Mr. Morgan said that St. Paul's rule held good today as it did at the time it was made, and that St. Paul could not be wrong, as he was guided by divine inspiration.

"We see the reason for this when we go back to the Garden of Eden. Adam was created first and Eve was created later as a helpmate. Woman is not intended to rule. She is inferior to man in intelligence as well as physique, although she is often more gifted in spiritual endowments."

Rev. Mr. Goble is of the opinion that St. Paul's remark applied only to that time. "In the eastern world at that time," explained Mr. Goble, "women were regarded as inferior creatures and were held in strict subjection. To have the new religion, which was then none to well established, preached by a woman, would tend to discredit it in the minds of the people.

"Today, when the rights of women are recognized, St. Paul's rule does not apply. Provided a woman has a voice of sufficient volume to be heard, she should preach if she feels she isc alled to serve God in that way."

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OPENS NEW ART COURSE

The Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce announced today the inauguration of a new special course in art in co-operation with the Massachusetts Art School.

This course, the first of its kind consists of two weeks' instruction at the Art School and two weeks' work at a selected store, alternating throughout the year.

Among the stores that are making arrangements for this co-operative work are Jordan Marsh Company, William Filene's Sons Company, R. H. White Company, Gilchrist Company and Chandler & Company. It is expected that the names of other stores in this arrangement will be announced later.

Calls Straight-Line Fad Road to Ruin

Atlanta, Oct. 7 (I.N.S.).—The "straight-line" fad for girls and women is going to be the ruination of the nation, in the opinion of Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools.

"Hundreds of girls in the junior and senior high schools are starving themselves into sickness to get thin, when they should be trying to make themselves strong and healthy," Sutton declared.

Sutton made a plea for greater development of mental processes among young people instead of slavish adherence to textbooks and fact that they reach.

U. S. TO FREE AMERICANS

Peking, Oct. 7 (I.N.S.).—The American military attache here has received orders from Washington to proceed at once to Sianfu and liberate the Americans now imprisoned there by the warring Chinese factions. Plans for effecting the rescue were not revealed.

Shanghai, Oct. 7 (I.N.S.).—Appalling conditions inside the city of Wuchang, the Chinese industrial centre on the Yangtse River where the northern forces are being besieged by the South China armies, were described today by some of the 7 000 civilians allowed to depart from the city. The northern troops are still holding out against the attacking forces, but their situation is desperate, the refugees stated

FORD OUSTS BUILDER IN 'GRAFT'

The Blair Construction Company, sued in Detroit for alleged "graft" involving millions in construction work on three Henry Ford plants, one at Somerville, was ousted from the latter job a month ago, it was revealed here today.

When the Blair interests were suddenly removed from the Somerville work, J. D. Kuhn of Detroit was sent to take charge of installation. The plant will be completed early in November, W. A. Francis, New England representative of the Ford Motor Company, said.

The Somerville plant figures in the charges against the construction company in Detroit, alleging Ford employes were bribed to accept inferior material.

The complaint names John N. Blair, chairman of the construction company, and two Ford employes, J. L. Bowles and F. G. Brown. Blair is charged with bribing Ford employes. Brown and Bowles are both accused of taking money.

The Ford company complaint confessed it was unable to determine the exact amount of losses, because it was impossible to separate the "fraudulent transactions from the remainder of the operations."

The sum of $5 075 273 has already been paid on account for work done on the plants, the complaint said. The other plants involved in the suit are at Memphis, Tenn., and Fordson, Mich.

9 HOSPITAL HELP HAVE TYPHOID

Nine employes of McLean Hospital at Waverley, where there are more than 500 insane patients, are at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, with typhoid fever, several others are suspected of having the disease and all employes have been innoculated with anti-typhoid vaccine.

Milk supplied to the institution from its farm in Belmont is thought by officials of the hospital to be responsible for the outbreak. Although this has not been definitely determined, they have decided to use no more milk from the farm until a new pasturization system is installed.

State investigation of conditions at the Waverley institution, which is a branch of the Massachusetts General Hospital, has been made by Dr. Lyman A. Jones of the department of public health and Agent Harris of the Belmont board of health.

Decision of the hospital authorities to change the source of their milk supply was followed shortly afterward by a recommendation by public officials to the same effect.

The first person discovered to have the disease was Mrs. I. Miriam Stearns, wife of the man who has charge of the McLean farm in Mill street, Belmont, and the second was an employe of the farm.

Precautions to safeguard the patients, among whom no cases of typhoid have yet been discovered, according to Dr. Frederic H. Packard, the superintendent, were taken as soon as the first case was found. Dr. Packard said State authorities place their stamp of approval on his steps taken to prevent a spread.

While innoculations have been resorted to in the cases of employes it is not known whether it is advisable from a medical standpoint to innoculate insane persons, according to Robert Homans, a trustee of Massachusetts General Hospital.

Doctors are making frequent inspections of all at the hospital and at least six persons, including one child, are under suspicion of being typhoid victims.

MILLICENT HEARS SALM WAS SLAPPED IN FACE

Count Salm, who won and lost Millicent Rogers, American heiress, is in a new scandal in Vienna, in which his face was slapped by a friend of Prince Johann Lichtenstein.

RADIO TUBE OF 1906 EXHIBITED

Dr. Lee DeForest, universally recognized as the founder of modern radio, placed on public exhibit at the Boston Radio Show a curious looking little bulb—a very unpretentious thing indeed when placed in contrast with modern Audion tubes, such as we see nestled like glowing magic lamps in every radio receiving set today.

The little bulb shown in the glass case with Dr. DeForest gazing upon it, is the first three element tube in the world, which he invented in 1906. It is the very cornerstone of the mammoth radio industry, for without the miracle performing audion (or tube as the modernist is pleased to say) we could have no radio.

Singularly Dr. DeForest's first Audion is almost "of age," because in a few months it will be 21 years old. Quite 'grown up' are its modern images of highly improved types.

This little audion of old has been both "plaintiff" and "defendant" in the courtrooms of many famous patent litigation cases. Only last July Federal Judge Thompson in the U. S. Court of the eastern district of Pennsylvania, proclaimed that the so called Armstrong regenerative patent was a direct infringement upon the principle of the DeForest oscillating Audion.

In 1917 DeForest granted the American Telephone & Telegraph a license under his patent, and it was under this agreement that the Radio Corporation of America was permitted to market tubes of the famous Audion principle. Since its establishment in 1912 the DeForest Radio Company has spent millions of dollars in defense of its formidable wealth of patents.

VETS WILL SEE GRIDIRON FILM

The thrills of their football days will be felt again tomorrow night by disabled veterans at the government hospital in West Roxbury, when they will be treated to a special showing of "The Quarterback," a movie of the gridiron—through arrangements of the Boston Evening American and the Metropolitan Theatre.

Richard Dix is in the starring role. The football sequence was supervised by "Hurry Up" Yost, famous grid mentor of the University of Michigan. A cast of former college football stars put plenty of dash into the film, and some of the bed-ridden veterans will feel the thrill of the game for the first time in years. The picture opens Saturday at the Metropolitan.

The Loop Aerial

Loop aerial receivers used in apartments and buildings having steel frames can be expected to lose their directional properties, sometimes entirely. This phenomenon is caused by the "shielding" effect of the metal beams, which tend both to absorb and to reflect radio waves. It is most noticeable when the set is kept in a corner of an outside room. If reception is poor, try moving the set from one place to another in the room. The difference in results occasioned by a transfer of the outfit from one corner to another is sometimes astonishing, especially in districts where large steel buildings predominate. The radio waves may be bent all out of shape by the electrical effect of the structures, and may actuate the set only if the loop is pointed in one direction.

FRENCH LINERS WELL EQUIPPED

The French Line fleet is splendidly equipped, operated and maintained. These ships are all commanded by trained and experienced captains who are officers in the French Naval Reserve. The crews are carefully selected, and the discipline on board is kept up to the standard of the French navy.

English is spoken by the officers of all French Line ships, the purser, chief steward, etc., all with whom the passengers come in contact.

The best French cooking and the finest foods procurable on two continents have brought a world-wide and deserved fame to these ocean carriers. Neatness, promptness and completeness of service to passengers round out their comfort and make the few days of the passage seem even fewer through continuous enjoyments.

For safety at sea every improved method of construction or installation has been adopted, and every approved device or appliance has been installed. Incidentally, the ships of the French Line carry life boats far in excess of official requirements with a capacity considerably greater than the total number of passengers and crew. Nothing has been left undone to promote the comfort, pleasure and safety of all patrons of the line.

These many splendid steamers of the French Line maintain an excellent and most convenient service between Europe and America. Sailings are frequent during the favorite travel seasons these popular vessels make weekly departures from each port. The voyage between New York and Havre takes only a little over six days. All information relative to sailing schedule and rates may be procured from Henry Mulligan, N. E. P. A., The French Line, No. 53 Devonshire St.

DEPARTURE TIME OF YARMOUTH BOAT GIVEN

Many travelers between Boston and Yarmouth, N. S., have been bitterly disappointed for the past few weeks due to their misunderstanding in the departure time of the steamships. Effective Sept. 19 and until further notice, this ship leaves at 1.00 P. M. every Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

Low Rates for B. & M. Excursion to Montreal

Announcement has been made by W. O. Wright, general passenger agent of the Boston & Maine Railroad, that there will be an excursion to Montreal, leaving Boston October 9, on any day or night train, returning from Montreal October 12 on any day or night train at reduced rate of $10 round trip (in coaches only).

Visitors entering Canada who intend to return to the United States should carry with them such available documentary evidence, such as birth certificate, where native born, naturalization certificate whenever naturalized or affidavit certifying to their continuous residence in the United States or such identification which will establish their identity to the satisfaction of the United States immigration officers.

PLAN BOOM FOR POLK CITY

The slogan for Polk City, "Florida's Sweet New England Hill Town" will remain as originally planned. Its work will be along the lines of "Polk City in the Winter" and "New England in the Summer."

An organization tying up Polk City with all the towns and cities of New England will undertake to make Polk City in fact "Florida's Sweet New England Hill Town" and connect up its finances and financial institutions with Central Florida on a basis of permanent confidence.

MOHAWK TRAIL BY RAIL TRIP

A trip through the picturesque Berkshire Hills, now in the glory of their changing autumnal foliage and the never-to-be-forgotten ride through the Hoosac Tunnel is announced by the Boston and Maine Railroad for Sunday, October 10.

This excursion will present features of delight and even the most confirmed motorist will be glad to take this wonderful trip along the "Mohawk Trail by Rail" and exchange the strain, and worry of motoring over congested roads on the week-end, for the comfort and pleasure to be gained by train.

There will be an opportunity at North Adams to go by motor over Hoosac Mountain to Charlemont and return in time to connect with the excursion train.

Tickets for final excursion of the season will be good on excursion train from Boston leaving North Station at 9.00 A. M., Sunday.

Penn. R. R. Plans Changes

It is only a matter of time when New York will be linked with Philadelphia and Washington by electric railroad service as indicated by orders placed with the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company by the Pennsylvania railroad. The Pennsylvania's orders call for equipment for 93 motor driven coaches and four electric passenger locomotives for use between Philadelphia and Wilmington, Del.

LOW RATES FOR BOAT TRIPS

October, the herald month of Autumn, is the time for travel. And travel to a Bostonian should mean seeing the great "Down East" country of Maine, or a leisurely trip to New York City. The splendid service of the Eastern Steamship Lines can make the journey more pleasant, whichever objective is selected.

These steamers are widely and favorably known for the luxury of their equipment. The staterooms are commodious. The cuisine is of such high standards as to win comment from those who appreciate the best. On the boats of the Boston-New York Line are spacious lounge rooms, dance floor, verandah cafe and writing rooms. The music room and the orchestra, which plays for dancing each evening is especially noteworthy.

A feature for the traveler in October to remember is that these steamers are steam-heated throughout, thus making them all weather boats, which are warm and comfortable under all conditions. A special reduced round trip fare of $10 between New York and Boston is now in effect. Tickets are good for ten days from date of purchase. With this reduced fare the Eastern Steamship Lines offers Bostonians the opportunity of making that long desired trip to New York at a very low cost.

IRISH WIVES FIGHT TO RETAIN NATIONALITY

Dublin, Oct. 7 (AP)—The National Council of the Women of Ireland has sent to the Irish Free State's [illegible] Imperial conference a memorandum aiming for women the right to retain their nationality on marriage with foreigners. Sixteen nations are said to have granted this gift. The memorandum points out the case of an Irish woman who married an Italian and lived with him all her life in Ireland. She survived him by many years but was refused an old age pension on the ground that her nationality was Italian.

HARVARD MUSICAL CLUBS TO GO ON TOUR

The instrumental clubs of Harvard will make a tour of cities in the Northwest, [illegible] announcement made by W. Brewster, '28, manager of the organization. The final objective will be Chicago, where Harvard graduates are preparing to welcome their appearance. A. A. Holbrook, '28, has been selected as the leader of the Vocal Club for the coming season. R. S. Cogan, '24, will continue as director.

MRS. SCUDDER WINS DIVORCE IN PARIS

On grounds of cruelty, Mrs. Caro[illegible] Sturgis Scudder of the Back Bay, daughter of one of Boston's oldest and most aristocratic families, won a divorce today in Paris from [illegible] Townsend Scudder, member of a State street investment firm.

The Scudders have four children and had been married fifteen years. Their wedding in 1911 was a brilliant affair, coming shortly after the [illegible] mother, Mrs. Russell Sturgis, introduced her to society and in the week of Scudder's graduation from Harvard.

Suit for divorce was filed in Boston by Mrs. Scudder six years ago but nothing came of it. She [illegible] charged her husband with cruel and abusive treatment at Cohasset on June 10, 1919, and at Boston on Jan. 3 and 19, 1920, and also on other dates.

The Scudders have lived in Boston, Brookline, Cambridge and Concord. Scudder is now living in New York.

The other Americans obtained divorces at the same session of the Paris court. Mrs. Dorothy Parker McArthur divorced George Childs McArthur on grounds of abandonment. They were married in New York in 1914.

Walter Lauderback divorced Mrs. Nedy Brock Lauderback for abandonment. They were married at Valparaiso, Ind., in 1912. George Kittenough won a decree from Mrs. Fay G[illegible] Kittendouch on the same grounds. They were married in Florida in 1916 and lived at Sarasota and Tampa.

ORGANISTS PLAN MANY EVENTS FOR WINTER

Winter plans announced by the New England chapter, American Guild of Organists, include several notable musical events. First on the program will be an organ recital by Chandler Goldthwaite, of New York and Paris, in the First Church of Boston on Oct. 12. Other events are a vesper service at Wellesley College, services at the Church of the Redemption, at the Swedenborgian Church and at Trinity Church, recitals at Phillips Andover Academy, the Boston City Club, the new Old South Church, and Emmanuel Church. It is expected M. Louis Vierne, distinguished French organist and composer, will be the Guild at the annual dinner in February.

games to two, St. Louis is delirious with pride, joy and excitement, and heavy New York is as much agitated as Newton was when, working out mathematics, proof of his gravitation formula, he was compelled, by emotion, to let someone finish the calculations for him.

THE BISHOP of London, who has been inspecting Chicago, and Lady Astor, who has just sailed away from us, criticize Dean Inge, because he says the British Empire has seen its best days. But the bishop and the lady may be wrong, although we all hope they are right.

Britain's power has been that of an "Island Nation," the power of isolation. She had her protecting channel, walls of oak, then of steel, in her ships.

But ships count no longer, except to protect merchantmen, and amount to little even in that work.

THERE ARE no more islands, for the real fighting ocean is the air, and soon it will be the travelling ocean.

One thousand airplanes, sailing from Geneva or Moscow, could wipe out London in a morning, and all the British superdreadnoughts in such a fight would be as useless as so many painted ships on a painted ocean.

HOWEVER, the British have intelligence and courage, more important than dreadnoughts. Britain's university students are taught flying and aerial artillery. Britain is building gigantic airships. If she can sing truthfully, as she soon may do, that Britannia rules the air waves, there is no reason why Britons ever should be slaves.

You can't say as much for this sleepy country. The airplane was invented here, but our government has not yet heard about it.

HENRY FORD says modern industry and employers fail in their duty to growing boys, not supplying enough jobs.

"It is easier for a girl to get a respectable job than it is for a boy to get one, says he.

WITH FORD, ideas and action go together. He orders his managers to employ, as quickly as possible, 5,000 boys between the ages of sixteen and twenty, put them at "man's work," and especially at work that will give them a chance to develop judgment.

According to Ford, people say that boys have no judgment, when they ought to say that they have no opportunity to DEVELOP judgment.

FORD INTENDS that his employes shall represent a cross section of society, all ages from boys to old men, from girls to old women, in the proportion in which they exist in the community.

"The presence of the older men adds a balance that would otherwise be lacking. It is unusual for a man to have much real judgment until he is around fifty."

That is useful common sense.

FORD'S REMEDY for the crime wave is to put boys and very young men at work to arouse their ambition and give them enough to live DECENTLY. A good idea.

The trouble is that bootlegging gives the young men what many of them want, a chance to live INDECENTLY, with high profits and a gun.

And even Ford has produced no remedy for bootlegging.

BY THE WAY, those that watch the career of Henry Ford will be interested to know that he has a new product, you will know all about it soon, that will add hundreds of millions a year to his gross output and tens of millions at least to his profits.

WE ARE an athletic, fight-loving nation. Mr. Tex Rickard's Madison Square Garden in New York earned nearly half a million for the first six months of the year. And the Dempsey-Tunney fight added almost another half million to the profit side.

Grand opera, on the other hand, always needs one or more "angels" to meet the deficit.

All-day freedom from perspiration odor

More offensive now than in summer

The change to heavier clothing—the confined air of heated homes, offices, factories, heated cars and theatres—the activities of busy, pleasure-loving people—make body odor a more serious, embarrassing handicap in fall and winter than in the outdoor months of the summer.

Millions give offense often without knowing it. Other millions have learned how to avoid giving offense. Take advantage of the remarkable offer you will see in your dealer's window and learn this simple, refreshing way to avoid personal embarrassment.

A Lifebuoy bath will not only destroy all odors of body and perspiration—it purifies pores so deeply that all day there will be no odor at all.

This amazing antiseptic cleanness doesn't merely hide odor—it removes the cause.

Guards health

Keep well. Avoid sickness by getting rid of germs. Lifebuoy is your surest every-day protection. School children especially need this antiseptic cleanness—always before eating—after play—before they go to bed.

Your dealer will offer you Lifebuoy at a big saving. Watch his window—ask him today.

Lifebuoy comes in a red box. It is orange red—the color of its pure palm fruit oil... Its clean hygienic scent rinses away quickly—[illegible]

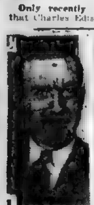
SONS OF RICH FILL SHOES OF FATHERS

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

You perhaps have often heard disparaging remarks made about rich men's sons in general. The contention has frequently been made that business talent, like that of literature and art, is apt to skip one or more generations. Lately there have been a number of striking examples that appear to indicate ability in the rising generation to fill the shoes of their fathers.

* * *

Only recently it was announced that Charles Edison, son of Thomas



Charles Edison

Edsel Ford

A. Edison, had been elected president of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and affiliated corporations, to succeed his father. For the past two years young Edison, a recent Boston visitor, has been successfully filling his apprenticeship as acting president. Then word came that Samuel Insull, Jr., had been elected president of Northern Indiana Public Service Co., a Midland Utilities Co. property, succeeding Samuel Insull, who became chairman of the board of directors.

Henry Ford's son Edsel, who has been Summering down in Maine, is "carrying on" business in a way to build up family traditions. In Boston we have, among others, the example of the Nawns, builders of the world's greatest underground constructions. And over on School street you will find the great Boston Five Cents Savings Bank presided over by Wilmot R. Evans, Jr. This bank was founded and officered by three generations of Evanses—Alonzo H., 1854-1907, Wilmot R., 1907-1926, Wilmot R., Jr., 1926.

The late Andrew Preston, who founded the United Fruit Co. in 1899 and presided over its activities until his death at the age of 78 in 1924, was always a great believer in keeping dividends down to the lowest reasonable point so long as there was any healthy outlet available for the investment of the corporation's surplus funds. He used to say [illegible] be known just where the money could be profitably invested, while if it were [illegible] shareholders were [illegible] a few [illegible] with [illegible] proceeds. The company always [illegible] first stockholders, second says a Wall Street writer. Toward the end of his career the desire to stabilize shareholders' return and to render it immune from business fluctuations became such a passion that dividends were declared a year in advance and the money segregated for the purpose.

Secretary George A. Sloan of the Copper and Brass Research Association has been named secretary of the new Cotton Textile Institute. Certainly there is what people call "human interest" in such a selection, as "King Cotton" and "King Copper" maintain distinctive courts. Secretary Sloan comes from Nashville, Tenn. Mention of Tennessee and copper combine to remind us of the copper company that started out to make money with the red metal, did none too well, and then "came through" richly as a result of some of its product being in demand in the fertilizer industry.

Weyerhaeuser Timber Company, which has established one of the largest lumber distributing plants on the Atlantic coast at Portsmouth, R. I., plans to build model village for employes and will erect 50 houses, ranging from $5,000 to $10,000 apiece. Thus the town made moderately famous by the Vanderbilts is again "in the news." One village once a "model" has recently gone under the auctioneer's hammer in "Little Rhody," but that was an aftermath of the textile depression. The new model village is a signpost of prosperity.

GERMAN 'RAILS' TO BE OFFERED IN AMERICA

Washington, Oct. 7.—The American government is expecting, and likely to approve a proposal to float part of the German railway bond issue in this country.

Reports reaching here from Europe state that the allied nations have financially reached a decision to turn the German bonds into cash.

France is said to be particularly anxious to see bonds totaling at least two billion gold marks put upon the market, so that this sum may be applied to reparations payments. This is believed by the French to be the best means of bolstering the franc.

Belgium, Italy and Great Britain are said to have agreed to this project and the State Department expects the United States to be consulted. Official Germany is said to be quite willing, according to reports, but the public is divided.

The government would raise no objection to private banking interests in America marketing the bonds, it was emphasized. But the American government will not buy any of the issue.

HUB RUBBER TRADE BUSY

Fall season finds the rubber trade of Massachusetts operating on an unusually sound basis; all mills are operating full time, some at capacity; inventories of raw and finished goods are low, and a sizeable quantity of both is moving along the regular channels at an even rate.

Translated into individual cases, Hood Rubber is operating full time on a schedule of 70,000 pairs per day; the decrease from last spring is on account of change from tennis to gaiters. One pair of gaiters equals nearly three pairs of tennis in money value.

Cambridge is running a gaiter ticket of nearly 10,000 pairs; Converse went on full time schedule September 11, which includes Saturdays and is increasing gaiter and gum shoe ticket to a point where a night shift is necessary. The company also has been obliged to rent outside storage room on account of production demands for space.

Boston Rubber Shoe Company has concentrated operations at Malden plant, Fells Factory No. 2 at Melrose having been closed. A large gaiter ticket is being made.

MILLIONS HANG ON LITIGATION

Butte, Mont., Oct. 7.—The suit of Carson Investment Company against Anaconda Copper Mining Company is before Federal court and it is likely to last a very days more. It is an action for alleged patent infringements and involves several millions of dollars in which several companies are involved as defendants. It is understood that result should plaintiff win, will be considered as against all defendants.

Amount involved runs between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000, and there are five companies involved. Carson Investment Company charges that defendants for many years infringed on patent right of Carson to a side charger for reverberatory furnaces and it is asked that an injunction be issued preventing the defendants from using method and also to collect money asked for damages.

Butte case, like those against other mining and metal interests, involves two patents issued to Carson in 1915 and 1919, on his claim to the invention of a side charger on reverberatory furnaces. Anaconda Company is listed as a defendant in suit of a series charging infringements by smelting interests.

First suit against American Smelting & Refining Company resulted in favor of plaintiff in Court of Appeals at San Francisco. There was an appeal and decision was affirmed by Supreme Court.

PROSPERITY IS INDICATED BY NEW SURVEY

New York, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Continuation of the nation's present commercial activity into the beginning of next year is indicated in a trade survey by the National Association of Manufacturers presented to the association in its convention here today.

The survey was made by a questionnaire covering sixteen basic groups of manufacturers. A summary of the answers shows a favorable view of current and Winter trade prospects, a higher level of employment and wage conditions, an increase in production sales quantities and values and a prevailing industrial peace.

The consensus of present trade is 19 per cent. excellent, 78 per cent. good to fair and only 6 per cent. poor. On Winter prospects 16 per cent. report excellent, 83 per cent. good to fair and 1 per cent. poor.

Fifty per cent. prophesy better business than in 1925, 25 per cent. unchanged and 25 per cent. poorer.

Reported increases in production average 17 per cent. and decreases 19 per cent. Reported increases in sales quantities average 18 per cent. and decreases the same. Sixty-eight per cent. report an increase in employment since last Fall and 89 per cent. report higher wages.

A suggestion for maintaining and improving the nation's business is by solution of farmers' problems through affording him a market direct to the consumer, and by elimination of politics from consideration of agricultural questions.

Other measures proposed are "Economy in State and national administration, with a view to a reduction of taxes", "maintenance of a proper protective tariff," an increase in health conservation activities, establishment of a national commission for study and prevention of crime, extension of foreign trade, and "encouragement, wherever possible, of the building and growing in this country of everything built or grown in any other country."

GENERAL MOTORS NEW HIGH MARKS FORECAST

Wall Street hears report of General Motors Corporation for third quarter of 1926, to be published in a few weeks, will reveal new high quarterly records for net earnings and sales of cars and trucks. Net income is expected to exceed $56,000,000, which would carry the total for the nine months beyond $150,000,000.

U. S. STEEL TONNAGE WILL SHOW INCREASE

New York, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—Revised estimates of the unfilled tonnage statement of the United States Steel Corporation to be made public at noon next Saturday, have altered the earlier forecast of a decrease, to an increase probably in the neighborhood of 100,000 tons, resulting from large rail orders in the closing days of the month.

State Street Gossip

AMERICAN Brass Co. has reduced prices ¼ cent on all products with the exception of phosphor bronze and copper wire.

FALL RIVER tax assessment on mills for current year totals $3,493,413, increase of about $400,000 over 1925.

LOFT, Inc., sales in quarter ended Sept. 30, were $1,931,199, against $1,815,670 in the third quarter of 1925. Nine months sales were $4,045,669 against $3,783,947.

POTENTIAL loss to the cotton crop of $400,000,000 is estimated by one writer.

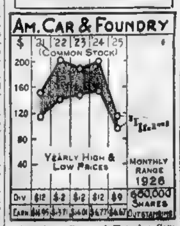
BOSTON postal receipts for September totaled $1,382,219, gain of $148,474, over September, 1925. significant trade index.

PIG iron prices have been advanced 50 cents a ton. No. 2 foundry is now $18.50 a ton, basic $18 and Bessemer $19.

INDIAN Motorcycle Co. declared dividend of 50 cents a share on common stock, payable Nov. 1.

B. F. STURTEVANT CO., of Hyde Park, report net income for fiscal year ended June 30, 1926, after all charges, of $437,151. This is equal after 6 per cent. dividends on preferred to $14.48 a share on common.

Stock Analysis



American Car and Foundry Company, largest manufacturer in the United States of passenger and freight railway cars, has enjoyed an excellent record of earning power since organization in 1899.

This is shown by the fact that dividends of 7 per cent. per year have been paid continuously on the preferred stock while common stockholders have received dividends at varying rates in every year since 1899 with the exceptions only of 1905 and 1908.

The company's plants are located throughout the country. In addition to producing railway cars, the company also makes car wheels, malleable and grey-iron castings, axles and similar products.

During the ten years ended in 1926 net profits were equal to an annual average of $10.45 on the no par value common stock.

In the fiscal year which ended April 30, 1926, $6.67 per share was earned on the common stock as compared with $6.77 per share earned in the previous fiscal year.

The company is in excellent financial condition since current assets at last report amounted to nearly 56 million dollars while current liabilities totalled slightly less than 15 million dollars. There is no funded or bank debt outstanding.

The common stock at the present time pays $6 a share per year.

1000-Year Leases

Leases for the term of 1,000 years are not so common as yet that they attract no special interest. In connection with a new bond issue, one finds the Portland & Rumford Falls Railroad owns that portion of the Maine Central Railroad system from Rumford Junction to Rumford and from Canton to Livermore Falls. This property is leased for 1,000 years from 1907 to Portland & Rumford Falls Railroad and subleased to Maine Central Railroad for 999 years.

It takes a true prophet, if there is any such thing, rather than an expert statistician to tell what conditions will prevail at the end of 1,000 years.

Year's Dividend Payments Viewed as Ably Earned

By GEORGE W. HINMAN

CHICAGO, Oct. 7

WITH the first days of October come the usual statements of business dividends.

As given in news dispatches, the dividends now going into the hands of stockholders amount to $106,000,000; apparently these are the dividends on securities bought and sold in Wall Street. At a guess, the figures mean that dividends on such securities are being paid out at the rate of almost a billion and a half a year.

Geo. W. Hinman

This is a neat amount even in these days of business prosperity. Yet, at that, it probably tells only the story. A multitude of enterprises, which never are quoted on the brokers' blackboards, have securities afloat and are paying dividends on them.

In 1919—a year not so good as this—the total for dividends is given as two and a half billion. When this year's dividend payments come to be counted up accurately—probably in about 1930—they doubtless will be found to total something like three billion or three and a half billions for the whole country.

Those are figures to goggle at. They will excite all sorts of comment. Yet, when looked at carefully, they are neither spectacular nor astonishing.

THE value of all the stocks on the big exchange is around $35,000,000,000. Now, if all the billion and a half of yearly dividends in Wall Street be figured as paid on these stocks, the average dividend rate would be only about 4 per cent. Nobody will contend that this rate is extravagant, except perhaps the man who regards all dividends as wrong.

That is one idea to be kept in mind. Another idea is that though companies and enterprises and securities in Wall Street are of enormous value, the country is full of companies and enterprises and securities that never are mentioned in the daily reports of purchases, sales, profits and dividend payments. Such concerns account, doubtless, for another billion and a half of yearly dividends, but they cannot be exactly estimated and tabulated.

But if they account for a billion and a half of dividends, mustn't these outside concerns be uniformly prosperous and profitable? The answer is "No."

The latest reports show that of 85,000 industrial corporations in the United States three years ago about 31,000 were operating not with profits and dividends, but they had heavy losses. These losses came to $700,000,000 in 1923. Yet 1924 was a good business year. Therefore it is a good guess that the losses are fully as heavy today.

So, if all things in and out of Wall Street be considered and the industrial losses be subtracted from the industrial profits the net result is not so very astounding or spectacular. The writer's guess would be that if the losses of all American industry were to be subtracted from the dividend payments, the result would be a sum barely equal to a two per cent. return on the investments. But this, too, is a mere guess.

THE foregoing estimates suggest another thought. In spite of the billions earned and paid by business in the course of a year, there are wrecks and failures and losses all along the road in business just as there are wrecks and failures and losses all along the road in farming. Not all business men are equal—any more than all farmers are equal.

Business ability of the first class—dividend earning ability—is largely what a British socialist calls a "natural monopoly" of a few men of exceptional talent. As managers and even adventurers in the field of business these men are quick to see when and where the public can be best served with what the public wants and how the public's need can be most quickly and cheaply satisfied, as well as to what extent the public's desires and tastes can be most accurately anticipated.

These men work to create profits and dividends, and to their direction a large part of the profits and dividends now being paid out are plainly due. This is not a popular saying, but a true one. On the other hand, where men of the sort are lacking there are neither the profits nor the dividends—nor, incidentally, the so-called "service" that the public wants to satisfy its need. There is instead a bunch of deficits, like the $700,000,000 already mentioned, or like the "red" billions now piling up in Russia.

FOR such reasons, as well as many others, the dividend payments of this month and this year are neither sensational nor spectacular. On the whole they are ably earned, they are in no way excessive: they are, in most cases, satisfactory—and that is all.

ISLAND CREEK AFTER B. & M. CONTRACT

Contract has been practically closed between the Island Creek Coal Co. and the Boston & Maine Railroad whereby the coal company is to supply the railroad with 4,000,000 tons of coal over the next four years.

The road uses about 1,200,000 tons of coal annually and pretty nearly all its fuel requirements during the next four years will be filled with Island Creek coal, as in the past.

Deliveries under the new contract will begin April 1 of next year. Boston & Maine has used Island Creek bituminous almost exclusively for over a year and its efficiency for steam producing purposes, together with the assurance that a steady supply can be depended upon, moved the road to sign up for four years.

Both seller and buyer shy from any disclosure as to price. The price Island Creek will receive however, is understood to be extremely satisfactory and in the contract there is a certain amount of elasticity so that all benefits of a rising market would not be lost by the Island Creek Co., simply because it was under contract.

FRAMINGHAM awarded to Estabrook & Co. at 100.58, $60,000 water bonds, dated Oct. 15, 1926, and maturing 1930 to 1964.

Ruth's Mighty Bat Leads Yankees to Victory

By DAMON RUNYON.
Universal Service Staff Correspondent
Copyright, 1926, by Universal Service

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—That mighty man, George Herman Babe Ruth, went to Sportsman's Park for the fourth game of the World's Series of 1926 bubbling like a camel over a brilliant idea that had come to him during the night.

"The boys ain't hitting" reflected that mighty man, George Herman "Babe" Ruth.

The thought appalled him.

"I know what I'll do," he said to himself. "I'll do the hitting myself."

Damon Runyon

Then that mighty man, George Herman "Babe" Ruth burst into the baseball orchard, and in the presence of 38,825 astounded customers, he ran what you might call a very considerable muck.

He belted out three glowing home runs, one for each of his official times at bat. He was up five times, and walked twice. He personally carried in four runs, and drove in a fifth, or fifty per cent. of the Yankee's total score of 10 to the Cardinal's 5. He was largely responsible for the Yank's moving up to even terms with the St. Louis club in the series, with two games each, at a time when they seemed to be on the run.

That mighty man, George Herman Babe Ruth, hung up a new home run record for one game of a World Series, equalling in that single game the home run record for an entire series held by himself, Goose Goslin, and Joe Harris, of the Washington Club.

He hit two of his homers into the right field pavilion, and the third smack-dab into the center field bleacher, leaving the home town rooters simply speechless with astonishment.

It shows what can come of a man devoting a few minutes to quiet reflection.

Under the inspiration of that mighty man's mauling, the rest of the Yankees chirked up, and did some auxiliary pounding against an assortment of pitchers of one kind and another produced by Rogers Hornsby. They got fourteen hits, all told. So did the Cardinals. And I might add, it was just that kind of a baseball game.

ST. LOUIS DISAPPOINTED.

The series now travels back to New York City, after the game today.

Will Klem called a third strike on Earle Combs, the first man to face Flint Rhem, the young pitcher whose name sounds like a patent medicine, and Earle gazed reproachfully at Will. His reproach was not nearly as poignant as that of Mark Koenig, who swung out with great rapidity.

George Herman Babe reached for that first pitch and sarcastically golfed it into the right field pavilion for a home run.

Bob Meusel got his base on balls and Gehrig singled through Bottomley's legs. Bob got around to third, O. K., and when he saw that Southworth had chucked the ball in to Hornsby at second as Gehrig moved for that point, Robert started homeward. Hornsby whipped the pill into O'Farrell at the plate, and although Robert took a long, long slide, Will Klem pronounced him quite out.

Things didn't look so rosy for Waite Hoyt, the author-pitcher, as he pitched to Taylor Douthit. The young man singled to deep short, beating Koenig's throw by a Grecian nose. On a hit and run play, Southworth singled over second, putting Douthit on third.

Hornsby singled to right, scoring Douthit, and putting Southworth on second. Urban Shocker busted down to the bull pen and started warming up. Bottomley raised a fly to Ruth, and the runners held fast. Bell hit a fly to Combs and Southworth moved to third after the catch, Hornsby sticking to first.

Hornsby stole second, then Hoyt fanned Hafey.

Lazzeri, the young Yankee second-baseman, tossed away a run in the Yanks' second. He drove the ball to deep left for a nice comfortable two-bagger, but tried to make it a triple and was squelched at third. Severeid followed with a single to center after Dugan had gone out. Hoyt popped to Hornsby.

O'Farrell, Thevenow and Rehm were quickly effaced in the Cards' second, the latter on strikes.

Combs and Koenig were promptly extinguished, then up came that mighty man, George Herman Ruth, again.

He hauled off and banged the first ball pitched to him by Rehm into the right field bleacher, almost on a line.

OUTHFIELD COLLISION

Columbia Lou Gehrig opened the Yanks' batting side of the fourth with a strikeout. Lazzeri walked. Then Joe Dugan hit a short fly to left center, and Douthit and Hafey went after the ball. They apparently did not see each other and both reached for it at the same instant. The impact of their bodies knocked them both cold on the grass, and the ball skittered away.

Lazzeri kept running from first as the ball players lay stretched on the greensward. Thevenow chased the ball and threw to the pate, but Lazzeri scored ahead of the throw by a long slide. Dugan pulled up at second. Then time was called and the entire Cardinal bench hurried to their fallen brethren. They both finally scrambled to their feet and play was resumed.

Severeid singled to center, and Dugan tried to score from second. Douthit made a nice throw to the plate and Jumping Joe was waved out. Hoyt was called out on strikes.

Koenig made a remarkable catch of a twisting fly from Bell's bat in the Cards' fourth. Hafey singled over second.

When play resumed, Koenig booted O'Farrell's grounder. Thevenow pumped a drive across first base along the foul line for two bases, scoring Hafey and putting O'Farrell on third. Torporcer, batting for Rhem, hit a fly to Combs in short center, and O'Farrell scored the tying run.

Douthit hit a long drive in between Ruth and Combs for two bases, scoring Thevenow. Southworth singled to left, but the Yanks finally got a real throw from their outfield, Ruth shooting the ball to Severeid in time to tag out Douthit at the plate, ending the inning.

Reinhart, the southpaw, succeeded Rhem. Reinhart started out by passing Combs. Koenig lifted a high fly over the right field, and Hornsby, Bottomley and Southworth all failed to reach it, Combs running all the way home, tying the score again. Ruth got his base on balls. Meusel walked, filling the bases. Gehrig walked, forcing in Combs. That concluded Reinhart, and Herman Bell came in.

Lazzeri lifted a long high fly to Southworth and Ruth scored, Meusel moving to third. Gehrig remained on first. Dugan hit a high bouncer in front of the plate, and O'Farrell ran out, got the ball and threw to first, getting Dugan. Meusel had a very long lead off third, however, and scored behind

DEFEAT FAILS TO DISCOURAGE US—O'FARRELL

By BOB O'FARRELL,
Catcher for the Cardinals.
Written Expressly for Universal Service.

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—Well, Babe Ruth can't make three home runs in every ball game. And our pitchers don't hand out ten passes in every game. That's the thing we're thinking about just now as a sort of comfort for the beating the Yanks gave us.

It was Ruth's batting rampage and our pitchers' liberality with the old free coupon stuff that gave the Yanks their second victory. We fought to the limit, we hit at terrific clip and we played the game at bat and in the field. But all that wasn't good enough to overcome Babe's three homers and the kindness of our pitchers to the Yankee batters.

So long as we had to lose I'm glad for Babe's sake that he cracked the World Series record by thumping out three homers in one game. His greatness deserves the honor and the fame that has come to him.

Are we discouraged by defeat? No—101 times NO!

We figured we couldn't win them all. We lost this one and that cost us the lead we had in the series. But we were up there hitting in the same old way and a team that is hitting is the ball club to win a World Series.

Chief Gunner Ruth Hero of Battle

By JOHN KIERAN,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—The Yanks finally began to hit and that told the tale of the fourth game.

The Huggins heavy artillery fired in salvos and bombarded the Cardinals into a disorderly retreat. The three record-breaking home runs of Chief Gunner Ruth were the high spots of the afternoon, but all the Yankees took a hand in the general firing and the result was delightful, from a New York point of view.

It was considered by many observers that Manager Huggins had made a strategical error in starting Waite Hoyt on the mound, but results vindicated Huggins. The series is tied at tw games each and Huggins has Pennock ready for today's contest. If he had won with Pennock he would not have been in such a favorable position, for Herb would be out of the reckoning. If he had lost with Pennock the Yankees would have been in a sad plight.

"Big Three" Representatives Silent on Conference

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 7.—Nothing of what transpired at the conference of athletic representatives of Harvard, Yale and Princeton to settle "Big Three" sport problems will be made public until the Crimson and Tiger representatives have returned to their respective homes.

Prof. G. H. Nettleton of Yale made this announcement following the conference held here behind closed doors. Prof. Nettleton, chairman of the board of control of the Yale Athletic Association; Prof. J. Kennedy, director of athletics at Princeton, and William J. Bingham, director of athletics and chairman of the committee on athletic sports at Harvard attended the meeting held at the home of Prof. Nettleton and the questions discussed and the decisions reached were kept a closely guarded secret.

Yale, according to officials at the university, had few problems to settle with the other members of the "Big Three," and it was said that the conference, principally of interest to Harvard and Princeton, held here merely because it was a central point and regarded as neutral territory.

Yale's biggest interest in the meeting, it was said, was a desire to prevent a break, if possible, in the athletic relations that have bound together the three large colleges of the East.

It was expected here that the principal topic of discussion at the conference would concern the report, that the Crimson 1927 football ule would show that Princeton been dropped and the University of Michigan substituted.

It was expected that the recent agreement reached between Yale and Princeton which puts an end to all scouting before the Yale-Princeton game would be taken up at the conference.

William Bingham, director of Harvard athletics, said before the conference that no statement would be made by him or Mr. Kennedy, the Princeton representative. He insisted that he should return to Cambridge and report to Harvard athletic bodies before discussing the matter.

GENE TUNNEY WILL BE HONORED AGAIN SATURDAY

New York, Oct. 7.—Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, will once again be received at City Hall when Mayor Walker presents to him his commission as a first lieutenant in the Marine Reserve Corps at 12.30 Saturday afternoon. The ayor will act on behalfM of Major General John A. Lejune, Commandant of the Marine corps.

Tunney will wear the dress uniform of the corps when the oath is administered in the historic reception room in City Hall and later on the steps two marine officers will pin the insignia of rank on the champion's shoulders.

'Babe' Starts Eating With Knife Again

By BUGS BAER

HUGGINS managed to get another load of hay through the flaming forest.

THE Yanks came to life like a goldfish in salt.

THE Babe quit trying to be stylish at the table. He started eating with his knife again.

THE way he dropped sparks into the bleachers made the fans think he was using a Roman candle for a bat.

YOU can warm yourself on this game all Winter.

BABE'S first home run hatched all the eggs in Missouri.

HIS second home run rang all the fire gongs in New York.

HIS third bobbed Judge Landis' hair.

THREE home runs in one game is a record for organized delirium.

FEATURE of game was collegiate base running. Three Yanks were smeared by long throws before they discovered that the St. Louis outfield was being played by three guys from the American rifle team.

AN old hog-caller in the bleachers tried out his lily cup on a friend's head. It was a bloomer and they both cried bitterly when they realized they had waited thirty-eight years for this moment.

BABE RUTH went to left field because he can't play the sunfield in the rain.

THE mob gave Babe the same kind of a welcome that a burglar gets from a police whistle.

NOBODY CAN STOP US NOW, SAYS MEUSEL

By BOB MEUSEL,
Outfielder for the Yankees.
Written Expressly for Universal Service

St. Louis, Oct. 7.—Everything looks a whole lot different now.

For the first time since the series started, we did some hitting. We did it when hits meant runs. The batting eye of the whole club did a great come back and when we're hitting no ball club in the world can beat us.

I knew we'd do some hitting—knew it before the game started. I knew we'd get out of the slump. And now that we're out of it we are going right along and club our way to the championship.

Haines made us look bad in one game, Alexander made us look bad in another. But they'll never do it again. We're out to give those fellows a neat pasting if they come back at us. If they use Sherdel, the man we beat the first time out, we'll give him a dose of base hits, too.

I think the big advantage is ours now. We have Pennock to shoot at them ... Miller Huggins doesn't ... to hold him for the final game. If Herb doesn't work we have at least two other men—Shocker or Shawkey—who can stop the Cards.

PENNOCK VS. SHERDEL IN FIFTH TILT

Rivals in First Game to Put on Box Act Again in Crucial Contest

Bill Sherdel, slender left hander, was Roger Hornsby's pitching selection of the Cardinals and Miller Huggins, dictator of the Yanks, countered with his [illegible] hander, Herb Pennock, who held the Cardinals to three widely scattered hits in the opening game of the series.

The ball yard, small compared with other major league parks, presented a vivid, colorful scene as the Yanks took their places for preliminary practice amid deafening applause from the bleachers and stands.

OVATION FOR BABE

Nearly 40,000 fans had crammed and jammed their way into the park, a raucous, vibrant mass of humanity with but a single thought—to see the men of Rogers Hornsby come back today and carry away the spoils in the deadlocked series and thus leave St. Louis or New York with the edge.

Babe Ruth was given a tremendous welcome as he strode to the plate and sent a long drive down the first base line. The ball bounded into the lap of a spectator.

The Cardinals seemed to have lost none of their confidence as a result of the disaster of yesterday. Manager Hornsby declared before the game that his men would tame the American League entry in today's game.

"We don't care about this long distance hitting" declared Hornsby. "That's something we can do ourselves when it come to the pinches."

Huggins also was certain his athletes would virtually clinch the series.

HUGGINS CONFIDENT

"We are going good now. We got a late start in the series but the boys have recovered their batting eyes and will be hard to beat from now to windup."

Babe Ruth confided to admirers in the stands that he expected to knock out a few more homers to day.

Cardinal strategists exhorted their pitchers to keep their pitches as far from the Bambino's war club as possible.

The Babe received nearly 300 telegrams of congratulations on his feat of knocking out three home runs yesterday and spent the early part of the day in answering them.

PENNOCK with four days rest, should be at his superlative best for this important conflict. So, too, should Sherdel. This game under normal conditions, means the championship of the world. The club that loses will pack a terrific handicap into the sixth pastime. The teams stack too evenly for any burden to be packed along with comfort.

Hornsby gambled yesterday and lost. But he still has the pitching edge. He has Alexander and Haines in reserve, while Huggins has nobody in sight who shows any disposition to curb the St. Louis bats. Hoyt won his ball game and fanned eight doing it, but he was combed for fourteen hits. Which isn't good series chucking.

Rogers wasn't a great manager letting the Yanks draw up alongside his own club. His sturdy young athletes knocked over a lead and went out in front themselves. Then Mister Hornsby fiddled with pitchers very poorly. He let Reinhart linger when even the boys in the bleachers could see that the lank left-hander had no more control than an American in Canada.

MILLER HUGGINS likewise opines that his outfit is on the high road to a glorious finish. He can see the spirit and dash that carried the boys along so brilliantly last Summer back in the ranks. His big baby is slugging the ball once more and that always inclines the gang to shoot at the fences. Eight of the fourteen blows that bounced off the Gotham bludgeons were for extra bases.

From our own it looks to us like a fine free-for-all, with the Cardinals having what advantage there is because of their better pitching. They will need it if the Yank assault remains at par for a couple of ball games.

Mister Ruth cracked some five records while enjoying the largest day that any individual ever knew in such an important ball game. All his three homers were sure enough clouts. Two of them soared majestically over the right field bleacher roof and brought up against the house fronts on the far side of Grand avenue. The third was a prodigious clout that went like a bullet high up in the center field bleachers. It was just such a thump as Terry's record breaker that hit the center field wall at Braves Field.

RUTH GOES ON RAMPAGE

O'Farrell. Gehrig took second, and Herman Bell committed a balk that advanced Columbia Lou to third. Severeid was intentionally passed. Hoyt tapped weakly to Hornsby forcing Severeid at second.

Hoyt gave his first base on balls to Bottomley in the Cardinals' fifth, but no damage resulted to the Yanks. Combs walked to start the Yanks' sixth, and Koenig struck out. Then George Herman (Babe) Ruth shambled to the dish. He was three balls and two strikes when Bell put over a high fast ball and Babe clouted it into the center field bleachers. It was a terrific smash.

A frail looking southpaw named Hallahan went to the mound for the Cards in the seventh. He erased Dugan, and Severeid singled, taking second on Hoyt's sacrifice. Combs doubled down the left field foul line scoring Severeid.

Picken, Green End, Injured

Hanover, N. H., Oct. 6.—A real, hard scrimmage featured practice. There were a number of minor injuries sustained. Picken, right end, while running for a long pass, tripped and bent his ankle. Trainer Hillman, however, is of the opinion that it will mend in two or three days.

Fuzonie was limbering up and looks like a sure bet for the right end position in the future games.

Dartmouth scouts bring back the word that the Virginia Poly team has a husky line and fast backfield who are able to carry out several clever aerial tricks.

Coach Hawley is taking the warning of the scouts and will enter the regular varsity team in the opening quarter. It is probable that he will send in his second string if the game is easy in order to save them for the Yale game which looms in the offing as a hard struggle.

Bouts Last Night

Oakland, Cal.—John Lester Johnson, New York negro heavyweight, scored a technical knockout over George Cook of Australia (7).

San Francisco—Benny Marks, Los Angeles flyweight, beat Bobby Burns, Manila (10).

GRANGE DENIES TALES OF ROMANCE

By GEORGE W. GRIMM.

Harold "Red" Grange, Wheaton's famous iceman, and galloping ghost of the gridiron, is today looking up and down the streets of our fair city.

Grange is here preparing his football warriors, known in the professional football racket as the New York Yankees of the American Professional Football League, for their battle with our own Herb Treat's Boston Bulldogs at Braves Field, Saturday.

Red Grange of today is a far different person than Red Grange who came here on his first visit with the Chicago pro eleven. Red was glad to greet the Boston scribes as he stepped off the rattler at the Huntington avenue station after a tiresome journey from Chicago. On his previous visit, he led reporters a wild chase to corner him.

In a bus enroute from the station to the hotel, we asked Red about a report that he was to be married. The dashing sorrel-top replied: "Well, if they have me getting married, they are all wrong. The way I am running about leaves me no time to think about matrimony.

"More than likely some day I will get interested in some young lady, but I am not at present.

"Having juggled ice around all summer, I am ready now to display my best form on the gridiron. You folks can look forward to seeing a different Red Grange Saturday than the player who came to Boston last December all tired and worn out and unable to show at his best.

"You ask me what I think of the prospects of the professional game? My answer is that I look to see the money-chasing football team a big factor in the sport this Fall and an even greater one next year.

"You see, everybody is sport mad and when they cannot buy tickets to see the college teams play, they will attend the pro games and, I am sure, go away satisfied."

Cubs and White Sox in Last Game

Chicago, Oct. 7.—The Cubs won the sixth game of the Chicago city series from the White Sox, 4 to 1, making necessary a seventh game, which will be played today at Cubs' Park.

WESLEYAN ELEVEN WORKS AGAINST COLUMBIA PLAYS

Middletown, Conn., Oct. 7.—The heaviest scrimmage of the week took place today on the Wesleyan gridiron. Coach Sam Hill and his assistants sent the varsity against Coach Daugherty's freshman eleven, which used some of the Columbia formations.

The loss of Holden, the big tackle, will be felt in the Columbia game on Saturday. Jacobson was playing in his berth at tackle today. Silloway did most of the punting this afternoon and will probably do so against Columbia.

JOE STECHER WINS BOUT WITH PESEK ON FOUL

Los Angeles, Calif., Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Joe Stecher, claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling title, won his match with John Pesek of Nebraska, here last night, after each had gained a fall and Pesek in downing Stecher for the second time, used a strangle hold, which the rules prohibit.

MICKEY M'GUIRE JOINS PITTSBURGH HOCKEY TEAM

Pittsburgh, Oct. 7 (A.P.)—Frank "Mickey" McGuire, former Minneapolis and Cleveland hockey star, has signed to play this season with the Pittsburgh professional club of the National Hockey League.

McGuire played last year with Minneapolis, champions of the western league.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

Tunney Tells How Study and Labor Developed His Mind and Body

CHAPTER FOUR

This is the fourth chapter of Gene Tunney's own story—written by himself—of his life and fighting career, written exclusively for the Boston Evening American.

By GENE TUNNEY
World's Heavyweight Champion

ST. VERONICA'S Parochial School was where I began my education. Later I attended La Salle Institute. When I was about fourteen, I planned to become a lawyer. My final schooling was at New York University, where I took a night course in law for one year.

Quite early I became fond of reading. Under the guidance of my preceptors in the parochial school and at the institute, I was nurtured in the classics.

In those early days I formed attachments for Sir Walter Scott's works. Particularly did I like "Ivanhoe." Later I began reading Victor Hugo—who even today holds me irresistibly with his romantic charm and vivid pictures of people and emotions and events.

About fourteen years ago, my father took me to the office of L. W. Hildum, port agent for the Ocean Steamship Company of Savannah. He told Mr. Hildum:

"He's too big for an office boy and it is possible he doesn't know the ropes enough for anything else. But I'd like to get him a job here."

I was gangling and tall. I hadn't begun to pad my naturally strong frame with the muscles that later were educated into the championship.

Gene Gets His First Job in Office

My ungainly appearance must have been accentuated by the fact that I wore short trousers. I imagine that I looked as grotesque as would the Statue of Liberty if garbed in a ballet skirt. But I was serious-minded and earnest. I vowed I would make a good office boy.

I never was censured by Mr. Hildum or any of his office staff and I understand that when I was in the ring against Dempsey, that same office force was cheering every blow that the radio relayed to their ears. I stayed with the company five years and received five promotions.

I started at $5 a week. I was getting $17 a week when I left. The $17 looked as big as did my check for winning the championship. I confided to J. L. Lake, my "boss" in the office, that I wanted to learn—that I would go to school nights. What a fine fellow he was! He would let me off when there was no extra work to do so that I could get to school.

While attending school I used to "work out" in the gymnasium. At the noon lunch hour I used to box a bit with the longshoremen and began to develop something of a scientific defense and a pretty sure offense.

I never had any real fights during my clerkship. I worked off most of my energy in the glove encounters. I really don't believe you get in many fights unless you look for them.

Imagination Fired by Reading

In those early years I was captivated by stories of the Middle Ages, of chivalry and knightly prowess. I learned from Scott, Tennyson, and others that mere management of arms was not regarded sufficient to make an accomplished knight. Indeed, the powerful boys of those days in their "stove iron suits" were presumed to be endowed with intelligence, strength and agility and were skilled in music, the dance and could run swiftly and ride excellently. In other words, they had to have enough ability to become movie actors had they lived in the great today.

I gradually became an all-around athlete. Today I can do the one hundred yard dash in 11 seconds or better and with training could make it in 10 and two-fifths seconds. I liked to swim and became good at that. Bicycling, rowing, fishing—I still like those healthful sports. A few years ago I took up golf and find it a wonderful tonic, relaxation and diversion. I am fair with the clubs, but my old putter sometimes gives me trouble.

Diversity Necessary for Champion

I think that any champion of a major sport should have some other sport or sports at which he is passably good. One sport provides an antithesis in a way to another and serves to sharpen up the main calling as a steel puts an edge on a knife.

I was reading not long ago in a dusty volume about Kolson, hero of the viking days in the North. He boasted nine accomplishments. He wrote:

"I know how to play chess: I can engrave Runic letters: I am expert at my book; I know how to handle the tools of the smith. I can traverse the snow on skates of wood; I excel at shooting with the bow; I can throw the oar with facility; I can sing to the harp and compose verses."

Kolson was quite a champion. I cannot lay claim to such prowess as that attested to by Kolson, and it is certain that I am no Martinelli with my voice, but I really have an ambition to be well rounded out mentally and physically, champion or no champion.

After all, men have done more with their minds than they have with their fists, and if it is possible to reach high with both mind and body, what a combination that is for anyone? I have done well by my body, in the way of education, and I am trying to do all that I can with my mind.

Tomorrow Tunney tells how he avoided pitfalls and temptations of youth.

TREAT TO PICK GRID WINNERS TOMORROW

Do you want to see a good football game, free? Then hurry up with those predictions, fans, for Herb Treat's Contest is on its last day for this week.

Tomorrow Treat's own ideas on the subject will be printed in the American, and midnight tonight is the deadline for the fans to send in their coupons and letters predicting the outcome of the five big games Treat has indicated.

Midnight! No letters bearing postmarks later than midnight will be considered. The opportunity awaits all who feel themselves to be pickers of Treat's caliber. But the time is short, so waste none of it.

The response to this contest has been amazing in view of the competition offered by the World Series; not even baseball's big moments can alter the lure of the gridiron.

Send your prospective scores and the 100 word letters in immediately. Tomorrow watch for Treat's selections.

For this week Treat, who is conducting this contest, has selected five good games: Yale-Georgia, Harvard-Holy Cross, Princeton-Washington and Lee, Brown-Lehigh, Notre Dame-Minnesota. Here are the details.

Three pairs of tickets to the three best games in the local sector will be given each week to those fans who come closest to picking the scores of five games which will be announced every Tuesday.

Selections must be accompanied by 100 word letters explaining the reason for the choices, and these letters will be the basis of determining the winners of any ties that may occur.

Letters postmarked later than Thursday midnight of each week will not be considered, as Treat's own selections will be printed on Friday.

Herb Treat's Contest

Pick the scores of these five Saturday's football games.

Accompany your selections with a letter of 100 words explaining them.

Mail them to the TREAT CONTEST EDITOR, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., before midnight on Thursday.

Watch for Treat's selections on Friday.

FULLER SIGNS FOR SHEPPARD

By JACK CONWAY.

SAMMY FULLER, North End featherweight who has the boxing class of the late Pancho Villa, has signed to battle Johnny Sheppard of Woburn in a ten-round bout at a Suffolk A. A. show at the New Boston Arena on October 18.

Fuller today stands forth as one of the most promising boxers in the country. In his last Boston start he knocked out Johnny Brown, European featherweight champion, in a round. Prior to that he conquered Carl Tremaine, in a torrid mill at Braves Field.

Jack Conway

Fuller has the speed, skill, punch and color that go to make a ring idol. In this respect he is similar to the late Pancho Villa who was the greatest box office attraction the boxing game ever had other than Jack Dempsey.

Sheppard recently returned from a victorious campaign along the Pacific Coast. Boston fans remember him for his victory over Abe Attell Goldstein, former world's bantamweight champion, and his sizzling tussle with Frankie Genaro, former world's flyweight boss.

The Woburn youth has the necessary aggressiveness and punch to give Fuller battle on even terms.

Soldier Lauds Tunney's Story of His Career

The following letter received today from Adjutant John Kruskall of South End Post, No. 105, American Legion, speaks for itself:

Boston Evening American,
No. 5 Winthrop square,
Boston, Mass.

Dear Editor:

As adjutant of the South End Post, No. 105, American Legion, I want to extend to you my personal compliments, and express my opinion that Gene Tunney's life story is a story that every public spirited citizen should greatly value and persistently read.

I am still following the Fighting Marine's story, and find it excellent and wonderful throughout.

Very truly yours,
John Kruskall
Adjutant, S. E. Post,
American Legion.

CRITICS WATCH SHARKEY WORK

New York, Oct. 7.—Jack Sharkey, the Boston heavyweight, on whom wise owls along the Roarin' Forties are going down hook, line and sinker to knock Harry Wills bowlegged when they come together in a fifteen-round jam at Ebbets Field Tuesday night, set the boys dizzy today in his daily dozen at Stillman's.

A big crowd watched Sharkey do his stuff. They left satisfied Wills is finally meeting an opponent who is capable of putting him to a test.

One of the spectators was Signor Humbert Fugazy, who is promoting the big event. He made a special trip to the gym to get an eyeful. He was surprised with the way the Beantown gladiator went about his business.

Fugazy expressed an opinion of Sharkey, saying he was the best heavyweight fighter in the racket today. Fugazy added that Sharkey had everything, and, judging him by his workout, he could lick any man in the world.

"She sure did surprise me," said Humbert. "I've been watching fighters come and go for a great number of years, but I've never seen Sharkey's equal. He's got a combination of everything. He's a fast thinker, as fast as they come, and can sock good and hard with either hand."

B. A. A. GOLFERS TO CELEBRATE

By BILL GRIMES

Although the annual Lapham Day, the third of which will be celebrated on Saturday at the Unicorn Country Club, is no longer a surprise to the former president of the Boston Athletic Association, he has something, in fact two things, coming to him which he little suspects.

At the second annual Henry Lapham Day at the Unicorn Country Club last year, Ben Hyde held up the entire field. In fact he needed a 6 on the 18th hole to give him even 4s for the round. He was home in 5, but left himself a 12 footer which he failed to "can" and then missed coming back and finished two over.

Bill Grimes.

Unknown to even his most intimate friends Hyde has been taking two and three golf lessons each week since the start of the season. He has been playing practice rounds on out of town courses but always with strangers. He has not made mention of his golf to any of his friends. When the boys at the B. A. A. start talking about their golf, Ben Hyde only listens. But he has been anxiously waiting and looking forward to the third annual Lapham Day.

Ordway and Eddy Lost to Eli Eleven

New Haven, Conn. Oct. 7.—A blow was dealt to Yale football prospects when it was announced that Rip Ordway of Winchester, Mass., and Max Eddy, of Middlebury, Vt., had been dropped from the squad for being behind in their studies.

BAKER CAPTURES Y. M. C. A. NET TITLE IN HARD MATCH

R. M. Baker repeated his success of last year by defeating L. F. Woodruff for the championship of the Boston Y. M. C. A. in tennis by the score of 6—3, 10—12 and 6—3. Baker, however, was pushed hard for the victory. In the second set he was three times at match point, only to be upset by Woodruff's strong comeback, and four times was Woodruff within a stroke of the set only to have the game snatched from him at the crucial moment. It required a set of 12—10 games before Woodruff was able to win. Both men were evenly matched, but Baker, with greater generalship, eventually came out the winner.

CECIL COOKE GROOMING FOR NEW TRACK LAURELS

Syracuse, Oct. 7.—Cecil Cooke of Syracuse University, intercollegiate 440-yard champion, has started training already in preparation for the Winter track campaign. Cooke is working out on the cinder path in Archbold stadium, under the direction of Coach Tom Keane.

Keane also has a likely-looking squad of harriers in daily drills, with Captain Clinton Loucks, second in the individual cross-country battle last Fall and second in the Intercollegiate two-mile run last Spring.

HEAVYWEIGHTS CLASH AT ST. JOE'S SHOW

The heavyweight class will feature the weekly amateur boxing program of the St. Joseph T. A. S., which will be staged at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin square, next Saturday night and indications are that at least six giants of the ring will be on hand to defend their laurels.

For the first time this season, the heavyweight class will be open to all comers. In previous tournaments the class has been for novices but the boys have developed so fast that the West End organization has decided to make it an open class.

Only two novice divisions are on the card for Saturday night. These are the 118 pound and 148 pound classes. All other divisions will be open. These include 112 lbs., 126 lbs., 135 lbs., 160 lbs. and heavyweight classes.

POLO PLAYERS DISPOSE OF MOUNTS FOR $139,000

New York, Oct. 7 (A. P.)—Members of the Argentine polo team, preparing to depart for home after an unsuccessful attempt to lift the American polo championship, have disposed of 34 of their mounts at an auction that netted the five members of the team $139,000.

TROJAN A. C. ELEVEN WANT GAMES AWAY FROM HOME

Budget Working Well After Six Months' Test

Budget Chat No. 171 by Martha Lee

IN ENGLAND they don't wait for the last Thursday in November to have a day of Thanksgiving. They celebrate it about this time of year and call it "Giving Thanks for the Harvest."

I'm not going to wait for November to stage a little private Thanksgiving of my own. In fact, every morning, when the mail is full of letters of appreciation for the help Budget has given, that day is its own Thanksgiving Day.

Here is a letter which shows what a miracle worker a good budget system is. I know you will enjoy it as much as I did. Mrs. R. B. N. writes:

"We are on the sixth month of our Budget, and for the first time in several years I find our cellar full of coal for the Winter, the children fitted out with shoes and Fall woolens with enough ahead for their cold weather needs, and there is money left over. Maybe you can guess what that means to us.

"My little girl is going to start music lessons, the boy can go out for football practice, instead of doing odd jobs around town, and I'm going to have someone come in to take care of baby one afternoon a week, and go on a 'spree' myself.

"How did I do it? Well, I found I could cut down on our food allowance by watching sales and working out menus which used every bit of food cooked. Then, I started to study the ways to use inexpensive meats, and made bread and biscuits.

"By the way, once a week I serve a 'budget' meal and the family really look forward to it. 'Fillin', but not fancy'. Corn chowder, two big pans of hot Johnny cake and apple tapioca is a sample menu.

"The school charts show that the kiddies have all grown well, and gained in weight. What is better, their posture is A-1.

"Soon my husband began to help me in the saving end of it. He whitewashed the cellar instead of hiring a man, and I cleaned and pressed his suits for him. I can do it beautifully now, but you should have seen the first one.

"Oh, I can't tell you all the different ways we worked it. But we did all pull together, and found that we had always had enough money to swing the home and family before but hadn't even tried to use it wisely.

"Now it is different, and it's going to stay different for ever more. Louise says she knows I will give her a budget form and account books for her wedding present so you see what a real enthusiast I am."

Uhmm. A letter like that makes us think some doesn't it?

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dear Mrs. F. M.: I am so happy to know that your Budget is proving successful. The economical recipes and other cook books have gone along to you. Congratulations on your stick-to-it-iveness.

Mrs. J. F. H. finds our budgets most practical. Would like to budget $30 allowance for self and three children, aged 4, 3 and 1 year. Husband is traveling man whose expenses are paid. Only home week ends. Has weekly milk bill of $2.52, children's insurance of 20c a week.

Is putting away $10 a month towards new furniture. The rest all goes for food and clothing. Would like to save something. Husband pays rent. Telephone is $3.50 a month. Uses electricity for lights, sweeper, grill, heater, iron and washing machine.

I wish you had told me your husband's total income even though his expenses are paid. It is necessary to base your budget on his total earnings. A standard $30 budget allows only $3 for savings and insurance, $6.50 for shelter, $10 for food, $4 for clothing, $4 for operating and $2.50 for personal out of which must come the new furniture, all amusements, doctor's and dentists' bills, newspapers and magazines, church and club dues, etc. As your income is more than $30, however, it would not be fair to budget this way. Ten dollars, however, is a fair food allowance for your sized family. If you will give me further particulars, I'll be glad to build a better budget for you.

Disease from Standing

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.,

MAN, you and I and all of us, bases his kingship in the animal world not only upon the fact that he has the most highly evolved brain but that he is erect.

He can do what other animals cannot do, not only because he has the intelligence to think and the will to do, but because he can stand up, sit down, or move about while doing it.

But it has been said that the law of compensation holds good in all things. If this is true it must follow that we are paying for all that we are getting by virtue of this higher evolution of our form and posture.

There are quite a number of liabilities and ailments that we have incurred that are not experienced by quadrupeds.

Thus, it is known that, in learning to walk, the bumps and falls of the child tend to develop conditions that favor the localization of infections in the marrow of the bones—conditions that are known as osteomyelitis and which may be tubercular in character.

By standing we put a large part of our body in direct conflict with the law of gravitation. It gets its revenge, particularly in the weak and rachitic, by bent bones and displaced abdominal organs called visceroptoses.

Hernia, a very common affliction of many, is likewise a consequence of our postural defiance of the law of gravitation.

Indigestion, constipation, appendicitis, ulcer of the stomach, epilepsy, and other conditions may follow as a consequence of this same visceroptosis.

Of course we could do much that we do not do to evade the results of our continual violation of this natural and unchangeable law. We simply can't change the law itself.

We can systematically train our abdominal muscles to greater strength and relieve them of the load of excessive fat so they can the better support the abdominal organs.

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore

THE jaunty little table in the upper left hand corner, of highly varnished and unashamed golden oak, achieved, some ten or fifteen years ago, an immense popularity among thrifty hotel circles.

By all the laws of physics and of misadvised furniture-making, it was doomed to sag promptly and wearily on its little canted-out legs; and it did.

No one but the manufacturer ever saw one of the species that was not at the point of collapse: the shelf disjointed, the legs loose in their sockets, the whole structure swaying menacingly to and fro at the slightest touch. Its career was as brief as it was useless; for once, complete dissolution claimed its own and saved our great grandchildren from one deadly variety of "antiques."

A table, or any other piece of furniture that does not stand properly, ranks with a pitcher that would not hold water.

Stability requires that the weight of the table top should bear down vertically on the base, and that the legs should be properly braced to insure their rigidity, as illustrated by the other tables in the picture.

Fads and Fancies

"Many Are Called—but few are chosen" is quite true of millinery styles, at the beginning of every season. Among the few to be definitely chosen are the small, draped velvet hats that combine black and a smart color. These have tiny nose veils attached, and are designed for dressy wear ... they are quite simple—their ornamentation lying in the grace and novelty of the drapery rather than in ornate trimming.

Helping Hand Appeals

JAMES, ill at a local hospital, expecting to get out soon, appeals for suit size 38 and overcoat size 40.

Mrs. A. H. will give a good home to a girl between the ages of six and nine.

Mrs. M. B. asks for warm clothing for girls twelve and six and boys four and two. Husband needs suit and overcoat size 36. He has not been working for two months and they have a hard time to get along. Children also need shoes. Stork is expected soon. Can make over anything.

Mrs. M. B. 1, mother of a large family, husband without work, would greatly appreciate a sewing machine.

Mrs. B. C., a widow, who has four small children, would appreciate furniture of any kind so she can go housekeeping and make a home for her little ones.

Mrs. A. C. C., widow with a sick mother, appeals for some bedding and warm clothing for her girl five and boys six and two, also for herself, size 40.

Mrs. M. D. 8 needs clothing and shoes for girls twelve and eleven, boys fourteen, ten, nine and eight. Also for herself, size 44.

Mrs. A. V. B., whose husband deserted her five months ago, would appreciate clothing for baby one year old, bed clothing, dresses for herself size 38-40 and a crib.

Some Timely Soup Rules

DO you know that lovely song which the Girl Scouts sing about the average meals of the average family that mentions S-o-u-p with a swoop for Monday, Wednesday and Friday?

The right soup, served in the right way is both a luxury and an economy. It is delicious and invigorating, and may either take part as the substantial course of the meal, or serve as an appetizer to lead the family on to the meat or fish.

But everything served in liquid form is not the right soup for every occasion. One doesn't serve a cream soup with a hearty dinner, or a clear soup as the main dish for a luncheon. One plans on the clear soup to enliven digestion for the full course dinner, and the cream soup to furnish nourishment at a luncheon or a light supper.

Neither does one insult a thick soup by serving it in bouillon cups or offend a serving of delicious clear bouillon by pouring it into the family soup plates.

However, before serving, the soup must be made.

Let's consider the heartier soups first, a cream of pea soup or a baked bean soup, for a main luncheon dish are always thoroughly enjoyed, especially when the children come in from school, starved as everything, and in a terrible hurry to start off again.

Hurry Up Pea Soup—One can of peas, or one pint of the fresh vegetable, stewed, one teaspoon sugar, a few drops onion juice, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one pint boiling water, one pint milk, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour.

Combine the vegetable with the water and seasonings. Simmer fifteen minutes, add the milk, bring to boiling point and thicken with the butter and flour creamed together. Rub through a strainer, reheat and serve. Pea soup may be seasoned further with a trace of minced meat.

Corn and Tomato Chowder—One-quarter pound salt pork, chopped fine, one onion chopped fine, one green pepper shredded, three cups boiling water, one-half can tomatoes, three potatoes sliced, two teaspoons salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper, one-half can corn, two cups hot milk, one tablespoon butter, two tablespoons flour, six common crackers, split.

Cook pork, onion and pepper slowly for ten minutes, add water, tomatoes, potatoes, salt and pepper, and cook until potatoes are tender; add corn and milk, and thicken with butter and flour blended together. Add crackers (which have been moistened in cold water), and simmer for five minutes.

Only three more days before the Food Fair starts and we can meet at the Martha Lee Hospitality Booths, No. 116, 117 and 118.

I should love to send you some of the special cut price rebate entrance tickets, if you will send me you name, address and the number of tickets needed.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

The WOMAN GAME or "GLITTER" by KATHARINE BRUSH

A Story of College Life; a Fast and Furious Romance

CHAPTER XXXIX

BUT they did, and soon. The same scene, with variations, was repeated three or four times in the ensuing days. All the paths of their affinity seemed to lead to it. When Yvonne let fall a hint that she was seeking work wherewith to replenish her ebbing funds, she met with fiery combat. When Jock sold some bonds of his own and attempted to press the money upon Yvonne, he found himself battering against a stone wall. She would not hear to an early marriage, she would not accept assistance, and she declined to leave her present place of residence.

Jock alternated between prayers and profanity, between tenderness and white-hot rage. He saw no valid reason why they should not be married straightway; and certainly he could see no reason that prevented him, her fiance, from doing for her the things that other, lesser men had done.

Gradually, though, he grew resigned. The new inertia, the langorous laissez-faire spirit that had taken possession of him made resignation with a few misgivings possible. Yvonne was being unreasonable, of course. But she'd "come to," doubtless, given time. And meanwhile life was sweet just as it was.

Mrs. Hamill and Yvonne met duly, and appeared charmed with one another. "Although," Jock reflected, "you can't tell a thing by appearances." He had engineered the meeting as a matter of course, knowing it inevitable, but with a certain secret trepidation.

One's mother and one's betrothed—well, there was a bar between, always. And when each was a woman fundamentally inimical to all other women, the bar might easily and at once become a grim and immutable thing of iron. . . .

He put in a busy first hour, mulling over in his mind everything they said to one another, every glance they exchanged, until they chided him laughingly for his silence. After that he talked a great deal and very fast, and ate, according to Bennett's calculation, thirteen small pink cakes.

Late that same night, after he had driven Yvonne back to New York, dined her at a cafe in the Village, taken her to the "Music Box Review" and afterward somewhere to sup and dance, he returned and roused his mother from a sound sleep, saying, "Well, how about it?"

Mrs. Hamill, for all her pardonable drowsiness, interpreted this question correctly "I think she's a dear," she answered heartily.

"I knew you would!" Jock exclaimed, and seating himself on the edge of the bed waited expectantly for more.

Yvonne Discovers Jock Can Play Banjo and Is Interested

More was forthcoming. "And so beautiful she takes your breath away, doesn't she?" said Mrs. Hamill, patting back a yawn. "Her hair is the loveliest I've ever seen. I liked her clothes, too. Good taste. If you'd brought me a daughter in a chorus-girl hat I couldn't have stood it. She must have money?"

The interrogation point at the end of those words was as a hook that caught Jock by the collar and yanked him down to earth. He frowned. "Some. That is, she did have some. She hasn't much right now." Perceiving that this was too vague, he indulged in a slight fabrication. "She lost all she had in the stock market."

"Oh, what a pity And she's quite alone in New York, didn't she say?"

"Yeah."

"Where are her people?"

"Dead. They've been dead for years. An aunt in Ohio brought her up." He got to his feet, in order to discourage further inquiry. "Well, guess I'll turn in. Sorry to have waked you, little sleepy-head, but I wanted to know what you thought of her. She thought you were a peach."

"Then," said Mrs. Hamill, snuggling into the pilolws, "that makes it satisfactory all around. Goodnight, dear."

"Goodnight, mother. I'm darn glad."

Yvonne's visit had another outcome, less proximate but not less vital.

During the course of the afternoon Mrs. Hamill had conducted her upstairs "to see Jock's den, you'll love it, he planned it himself." They had stood shoulder to shoulder on the sill, looking in. . . . A small, bright room, a happy room, walled in on two sides by books, row on row, from floor to ceiling, on a third side by long casement windows with dull purple hangings, on the fourth side by a giant fireplace, two chairs of inviting dept, with a reading lamp craning its neck above one of them, and a banjo leaning up against the back of the other . . .

Yvonne had moved to the chair and picked up the banjo, eyeing thoughtfully the nicknames and monograms and bon mots etched on its head. "I didn't know he played"

And Mrs. Hamill had responded, smiling, "I only wish he did everything half so well!"

Then Yvonne had taken the banjo downstairs and thrust it at Jock, and he had played it—oh, remarkably well! As Bones Allen was wont to say and would have said again had he been present, "Hot dog, like no one can!" And Yvonne had listened, pondering.

A few days after that she stipulated that he was positively not to come to see her the next day unless he brought his banjo with him. "Why won't you ever bring it, my dear? I must have asked you as least three times now. Don't you enjoy playing it, or what?"

"Sure, I like to whang away at it. But there's so much else to do when I'm with you——"

"Silly! You bring it tomorrow, or I won't let you in! I have a special reason for asking."

So he took it along, and pushed it through Yvonne's door ahead of him, crying "Passport!" meekly and plaintively. And he was admitted, by a particularly bewitching Yvonne in cornflower blue.

"You'd better!" she approved.

They embraced lingeringly, as was their custom. And they ran through the catechism peculiar to sweethearts.

"Now!" said Yvonne, "let's get down to business. I want you to play all the latest, and I'll sing, and we'll see how it goes."

An hour later they agreed that it had gone beautifully. They disagreed as to why, and had quite a dispute about it, Jock stoutly maintaining that the voice was the thing, Yvonne reiterating that those chords and that double break were sufficient to make any old voice at all sound "like Jeritza singing the blues."

She concluded, "Anyway, we're good. Plenty good enough, as soon as we've practiced together a little more."

Yvonne's plan—Read tomorrow's instalment.

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

The breeze itself offered me something—respite from the hideous, muggy heat that was weighing down on me and making my head ache as much as my heart did.

I slipped into a cool, purple chiffon dress and wore a big black horsehair hat with a pink rose. It seemed foolish to go trailing around advertising my misery. I realized that the day of the woman who is dowdy when she is miserable has gone by. And so I made it my business in life to look as chic as I knew how.

Diane Petruzzi nodded approval when I was ready to join her and go to the roof where we were to meet her pet protege, Carlini, and one or two more of her "artist pupils." And I saw that she took a very definite pride in introducing me to the little group who awaited us. There were the Lind-Masons a charming young couple who concertize with the husband at the piano and the pretty wife singing songs in period costumes; Carlini, Halsey Duane, the baritone, and Gregory, the brilliant young tenor, who had just come back from abroad. Carlini alone was not a pupil of The Petruzzi's, since his violin was a bit out of her line.

He was a wide-eyed youngster with a thatch of black curls and a terrified, nervous manner which made his blue eyes look almost childish and ready to send tears coursing down his rounded cheeks. His shyness and awkward eagerness to get into a corner where he could be left alone made him really pathetic. I found myself filled with a mother-tenderness for this boy of twenty-two or three who looked no more than fifteen or sixteen and who had probably lived and suffered as much as the average man of twice his age.

"Be nice to Carlini. He needs kindness," admonished Diane.

As we got into the elevator to ride up to the roof, I managed to stand next to the boy who was so much too young to have suffered so much and whose eyes told that I had never sounded the depths of misery into which he was staring.

"Do you think it is too warm to dance?" I asked with a banality I thought might be reassuring.

"I do not dance," he said

"Don't you like it, I should think all musicians would because the rhythm is part of their way of expressing themselves," I replied, feeling awkward under his sombre stare.

"I do not like to be conspicuous," he replied. "Do you?"

"I never think about that. I take it for granted that everyone is as much enthralled by the music and the floating motion as I am—and so I forget myself. I am sure you could dance beautifully if you tried."

"You might teach me to do that," the lad replied, seeming to warm a bit to my friendliness.

"I'd like to," I smiled.

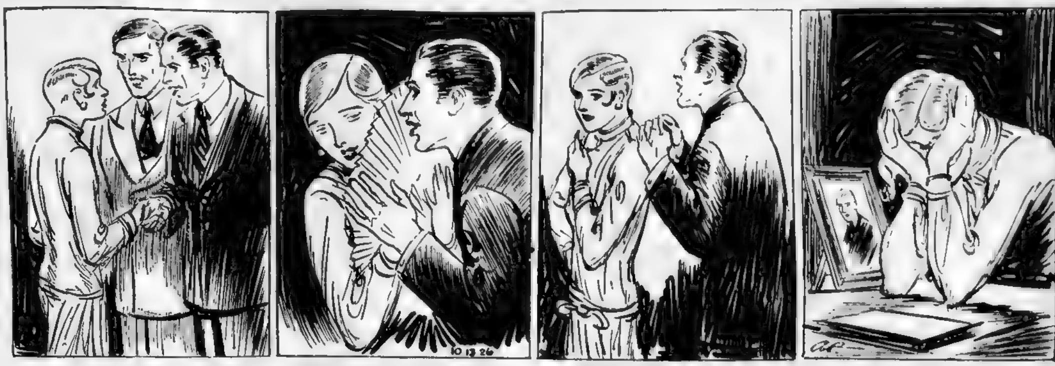
The Penalty of Flirting

By Beatrice Fairfax



HE IS ATTRACTED TO HER. SHE ENCOURAGES HIM. THEN TOYS WITH HIM. AND IS SORRY TOO LATE.

THERE are two sides to every question. If a man and woman are to find peace and happiness as friends, swethearts or marriage partners, it is supremely necessary that they duly consider and respect the other side.

The following letter from "H. H." has to do with a clash between a man and girl that came about because she could see only from the viewpoint of her own vanity and he felt it to be just that she should suffer because she made him suffer. She writes:

"Perhaps you never felt the torture of loving someone who did not love you. I have had that experience. And I know the feelings of the man to whom Blue refers in a letter you printed recently. He told her of his love. She, as she admits, was 'rather indifferent.' Probably he worshipped her, telling her secrets that had been held close to his heart. He buried his pride and humiliated himself by showing how madly he was in love with her. He might just as well have made love to the Washington Monument.

"Fool that he was, he confessed his love. Yet even a fool could not long remain blind to coldness and actions such as Blue's. So he took the only step any man could take and completely vanished from the picture.

"He was convinced he would never be missed. But, strange to say, he is missed. He learns that Blue is anxious to hear from him now that he is gone.

"Instead of being fair and telling him how useless it would be to press his love, she let him fall deeper and deeper in love, then took up an indifferent attitude.

"Blue's friend should have left her the first time he met her. But she vamped him, making him believe she was the only girl for him. Then when the poor man broke the ice by telling her how much he loved her, she figured she had accomplished something by making a fool of him.

"Well she has found flirting dangerous for she loves him now that he is gone."

You are quite right H. H. A girl who deliberately "vamps" a man by insincerely leading him on, then [illegible] assumes an indifferent pose which is even more [illegible] deserves to suffer.

Sometimes a [illegible] inexperienced girl is thought [illegible] cruel in her love affairs just as little children are cruel. Then the sharp experience of unrequited love awakens her heart to capacity for kind, enduring affection.

"The Secret Studio"---Larry Is Jealous of Sloan Whitney

blur under her dark little hat. Her elbow was round and soft under his fingers as he guided her across the street.

"All right," he said, "I'll get you off on Whitney. But you gotta be pretty nice to me now to make up."

* * *

Rosemary used to complain that nothing ever happened. And now things were happening. Happening fast.

A hundred new interests beckoned. A hundred new doubts and fears and joys were opening up before her.

The sweetness of the new intimacy with Nina. Nina's spacious lamp-lit studio with the deep, soft chairs. And Nina's clothes, rack after rack of them, exotic, costly, amber scented.

But Larry didn't fit into Nina's studio. It made Rosemary vaguely uncomfortable to see him there.

Rosemary mused, and always her thoughts came back to Nina. [illegible] Nina and her father's friend, Stanley Cuyler. Lucky Nina! And here would come another thought—another man, well dressed, assured, like Cuyler—Sloan Whitney, Larry's friend.

"I'll never see him again!" she told herself hotly.

But she knew she would meet him again, knew that somewhere, sometime he would come into her life. She only told herself he wouldn't.

So she wasn't surprised when he came back. It was late afternoon, the day after she had spent the night with Nina. She was reading in the back of the store.

And suddenly he was there before her, looking down at her half smiling, speaking in that same low pitched, bored, yet strangely thrilling voice.

"So this is where you live?"

She nodded, laughingly, and the long, black lashes swept her cheek.

"Something I can do for you?" It was Mr. Graham, interrupting. Coming between them. Taking Whitney away from her!

Graham was having a wonderful time. His Van Dyke quivered as he talked His little eyes glittered back of the horn rimmed glasses. Book after book he piled up on the ledge beside him. Mr. Whitney was a man after his own heart.

Mr. Haley hovered near, ready to see to the packing. Mr. Simms moved nearer Rosemary. "That's Sloan Whitney, the big polo player," he whispered behind his hand "Seems to be a good customer!"

"I know. I—I've met him," said Rosemary, dully.

"Well, I must say!" he whispered at last. "I must say you fly high!"

Rosemary didn't even hear him She was straining her ears to catch what Graham and Whitney were saying.

Now he was going They were moving slowly toward the door. Graham's voice, oily and ingratiating, rolled on. Sloan Whitney's eye roved over the place; caught Rosemary's for one brief moment, and then with a little bow for her in her corner he was gone.

A great loneliness seized her. She must find someone who cared for her, someone she could talk to someone who would understand . . . Larry!

She moved quietly to the little back door, slipped up the stairs

At the first landing, comfortably sprawled out on a pile of fresh wrapping paper, sat Nina, having her afternoon smoke.

Rosemary stopped.

"Oh, Nina," she cried, "I'm so blue! I was just going upstairs to get cheered up!"

"Well have a cigarette. That'll help." Nina passed her little flat gold case.

Rosemary drew one out doubtfully. Ma would hate it if she knew, but then Ma need never know. And if it would help—

She lit it, puffed in imitation of Nina.

"How much do you like Larry?" Nina asked at last.

"Oh—quite a lot. Why?"

"Nothing. No reason particularly. But if you like him let him do all the pursuing He's that kind of a bird. He only wants what he fancies is the unattainable. So lay low on the visiting."

"You mean don't go upstairs for tea? Why, that's about all the [illegible] there is around here"

"Tea's all right, we all do that I mean don't go flying up whenever the notion takes you. Just a hunch I had. Maybe there's nothing in it. Five o'clock. Let's go downstairs. Almost time to go home."

They slipped quietly back into the store. Graham, hunched over a catalogue at his desk, did not appear to see them.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

THERE have been men who had too much of gold, too much of all earth's splendid, costly things, so that their wealth and worldliness untold made fetters binding down their spirit's wings. There have been men who had such pride of place, with keen ambition ever goading on, they had no eyes to see the oak tree's grace, no time to watch the budding rose of dawn. Be glad, then, if in humble ways you go in time with all the loveliness of Earth if in your toil-filled hours you still can know the lily's magic and the robin's mirth. Be glad of freedom from the thousand ties that can enchain a soul in vexing stress, be glad your thoughts have yet the power to rise as birds that soar to greet the wind's caress.

THE aborigines of Central Australia are among the most interesting people in the world. Although we look upon them as very inferior beings indeed, they are far from that, for their memory is remarkable. When once they have seen anything, be it tree, person or animal, they will never forget it. Their sense of sight is also extraordinary, and they an distinguish the essential difference in an object that would never be noticed by us. They are marvelous mimics and possess the keenest sense of humor.

Their descent is a very complicated matter—too involved for me to go into here very deeply. Briefly, each tribe is divided into two parts and those in Part One may only marry into Part Two and vice versa. As time has gone on for generation after generation, and as each part has divided and subdivided, you can readily see how difficult it would be for us to try to trace the ancestry of one individual. The wonder of it is how the savage mind was able to evolve such a plan and, having evolved it, was able to develop it to the extent that it has now reached, for the laws of marriage are rigidly adhered to.

The mother-in-law has a peculiar position among these people. For instance, the clothing of a man consists of a hair girdle and this girdle must be made of the hair of his mother-in-law. Another of her strange duties is this: Her son-in-law must have a front tooth knocked out, and this is rounded up, placed in a lump of meat and eaten by her as part of the marriage ceremony.

The aborigine is a profound believer in magic—black and white, or evil and good. White magic will cure disease and will increase the animals and plants on which they feed. Black magic will cause evil to visit your enemies, but it can be cured by a more powe'ul white spell.

The centuries have evolved a definite religious custom a d rite for the aborigine. A study of these will quickly dispel the mistaken idea that he possesses the low intelligence with which he is usually credited.

DAILY SHORT STORY

PASSING THE LOVE OF WOMEN

By Mabel McKee

THE famous surgeon had been like a man of thirty just an hour before, when he and Barry Moore sat down in the smoking room to wait for the other members of the class of '01, now holding its silver jubilee in the great city on the western coast. Now he was a middle-aged man looking even more than his forty-six years, his eyes full of the tragedy of the story he had just told.

Barry never dreamed that the telling of any story could so wreck a man, though it was the tragedy of the man himself. He assayed comfort to the great surgeon. "Blaine," he said huskily, "try to think of this boy as a genius some place—where you'll find him some day."

"I do," Dr. William Baines said heavily. "I do and just as I do, I see some young fellow with a wonderful forehead like he had, with flashing eyes and beautiful hands and then I—wonder," his voice was a whisper now, "wonder if he could possibly be—my son."

Barry was trying to think what he should say next when he looked up and saw the other members of the class the class of '01 strolling into the lobby. Coming for the big banquet—the biggest event of the reunion, at which Dr. William Baines, the genius of the class of '01 was to speak. He made a matter of fact remark about this to the man, known back in '01 as "Big Bill Baines" and together the two of them proceeded into the banquet hall.

While he mechanically shook hands with the members of his class and answered formal and meaningless questions, Barry watching the famous surgeon, remembered every detail of the tragedy he had just told.

He had quite aimlessly asked the question which had brought the story. "Any sons?" he had asked. "Of course you have some one to carry on the great work you've started. Suppose I saw one or two of them when I was back at the college last year. One fellow particularly impressed me- was sure he was your boy. Had great, bulging forehead like yours and hands—why man, that boy's hands were even more wonderful than yours!"

Then the doctor had told his story. It began the Summer he left college to go to Canada to take a rest after a heavy Winter. At the Southern girl was there. She played a violin—old Southern melodies which soothed the young doctor as nothing else did. While he grew interested in her, she fell in love with him.

The young doctor kept in touch with her for the next two years. Not that he cared, but her devotion amused him. Piqued when the girl he did love married another man he hunted up the little Southern girl and married her. "I wanted a son to carry on my work," he admitted pitifully to Barry, "and like a brute I told her that after the boy was born.

"Not in so many words, of course, but I prated of his hands and how they were like mine—of how I'd make a great surgeon of him. I sat for hours and look at them and tell her how he'd carry on my work.

"Of course, she grew tired of it and one day she said, in her dear little way, "he might have mine' his hands, doctor. Mine are that way and he's my son, too, you know."

She had spread out her beautiful slender hands then, according to Baines' story, and for the first time the surgeon realized how beautiful they were. Though her music on the violin had lured him in Canada he had never thought what her hands might mean.

Furiously he had pushed her away from the little orb in which his son lay. In bitter words he had denounced her. Said that no child of his should be a beggar musician. Told the girl wife brutally why he had married her.

In the night that followed she had gone away with the boy. Her pitiful little note said that she was taking the child so his father should never see him again. Better that he hands could houses and plant trees, than do work which would harden his heart as the doctor's heart had been hardened.

"He's my son," her letter had ended, "and I want him to be more loving and kind than successful. I never want him to know that his father married his mother without loving her."

No one dare to the trail had she left behind so he might follow. The surgeon sure that she would return, had searched only half heartedly at first. But when the days after her leaving had become long hopeless months he had taken up the search with detectives. But she seemed to have disappeared completely.

Barry watched the president of the class escort the great surgeon to the seat of honor; watched the other members stand until he was seated. It struck him with double force how empty these honors must be to this man whose one call was for his son and the girl wife whom he really love t.

A hush—the music of an orchestra, and after it the lilt of a violin, coming from behind a veritable forest of palms. It played "Traumerei," so beautifully that the men in the room sat spellbound.

The soft strains of "Swanee River" followed and after that came "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

Barry happened to glance at the great surgeon—stared at the look on his face—stared and then understood. He was thinking of his son who might have been a violinist, if he had been fair-thinking and then the great man spoke to the chairman, rose and disappeared behind palms.

A moment later the violin music came to an abrupt end. An awkward pause was followed by the orchestra's crash into a gay, rollicking melody. But the chairman's face was strained when he came back from where he had followed the speaker when the violin music broke. He scarcely touched his food; just watched the palms—watched and watched until they parted and the great surgeon came through, his eyes shining, his face glorified.

Barry whispered to himself one joyous sentence, "He has found his son—the' violinist."

But a little later came the denial to that joyous thought. For the violin sounded again in "Avalon." Just before the music ended, the violinist, a girl-woman in white stepped out of the forest and bowed to the assemblage in the room. Barry simply stared into space.

Hours later the great surgeon told Barry the rest of the story. The girl, knowing only one way to support the great surgeon's son, had gone back to her precious violin and had become famous along the western coast. And the son—well even now he was in a preparatory school. Going to be a surgeon big mother and!

Barry watched them leave together that evening—the surgeon and the girl-woman who had loved him so dearly throughout the years. Happy now they were! And Barry bowed his head. "Passing the love of women," he mused, "Passing the love of women!"

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

By William F. Kirk

I HAF been thinking & thinking for a whole hour, sed Ma to my dad last nite & I cant seam to git anywares with this birthday pome wich I am trying to rite to my deer frend, Alishia, sed Ma.

Alishia who? sed Pa.

Alishia May Bostwick, sed Ma, one of my school chums in the other yeers, sed Ma. She will be neerly forty on her next birthday, thirty-nine to be X-ack, sed Ma.

& fifty-nine to be moar X-ack, I will wager, sed Pa. How cud she have been a school chum of yures & be only 40 yeers of age? sed Pa. How cud she?

You need not shout, sed Ma. Thare is nothing rong with my heering, sed Ma.

But why do you old gurls always make B-leeve about yure ages? sed Pa. Speek the trewth & shaim the devil, sed Pa. You nevver heer me lie about my age, sed Pa.

Men do not cair how old thay are, sed Ma, but wimmen haf been deserted & left alone by men evver since the beeginning of time, sed Ma, the minnit thay looked old & rinkeld. That is why wimmin haf a horror of old age, sed Ma, if you want to know.

I hoap you doant think I am going to run out on you jest beekaus you are getting a little anshunt, sed Pa. I aint that kind of sport.

A little anshunt, how dare you say I am a littel anshunt? sed Ma. How dare you?

I sed you were a littel Anjel, sed Pa. Keap yure eers open & yure mouth shut, sed Pa.

How dare you tell me to shut my mouth? sed Ma; how dare you?

I dare much, sed Pa. I am a braiv & Ruggied man, sed Pa. My Ansestors was braiv & Ruggied men beefoar me, sed Pa.

Nevver let me heer you tell me aggenn to shut my mouth, sed Ma. Wimmin haf left thare husbands for that.

Doant be angry, wife, sed Pa. I will help you rite that birthday pome to yure frend Alishia, sed Pa; here is what you want to say,

Alishia, Alishia, the yeers fly away,
& you've seen moar yeers than yu're willing to say.
If I gaiv you a slap for eech yeer of yure life
It wud sound like a centi-pede beeting his wife.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c.

CORRECT MANNERS

THE WEDDING RECESSIONAL.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Does the bride's mother as well as her father give her in marriage?

2—Can the best man, who is a brother of the groom, walk in with the groom?

3—In walking out after the ceremony, does the maid of honor walk alone, when there is a matron of honor to walk out with the best man?

L. B.

THE bride walks in with her father, who presents her in marriage. They walk the last of the processional. The bride's mother is the last person who is seated before the wedding processional. It is very bad form—impossible form—to seat anyone after the bride's mother has been seated. She sits in the first pew on the left, since she is the hostess of the occasion. She does not participate in the presentation of her daughter in marriage.

2. Not only can the best man walk in with the groom, but he should. The clergyman, groom and best man wait in the vestry room or some other room at the front of the church for the signal that the processional is ready to start. Then they come from this room—first the clergyman, then the groom and the best man. They wait at the chancel stairs for the bride.

3. It is the best form for the best man not to take part in the recessional. The maid of honor should walk out alone, if she has walked in alone. And so should the matron of honor. If they should have walked in together, they should walk out together. In the meantime the best man goes to the vestry room to give the clergyman his fee (given to him by the groom), and to collect the hat and coat of the groom, to take to him in the cab at the front of the church.

I think it would be of help to you if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope, and let me send you my pamphlets on the formation of the wedding processional and the recessional. Will you do this?

Copyright, 1926, Premier Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MISS BEECKMAN:

Will you please advise whether it is proper to send out party invitations?

A FEMALE READER.

YES, indeed, it is. If the party is to be formal send out formal invitations and if it is to be informal, write your invitations in the form of a letter. If you will write to me what kind of party you are planning to have, I will be happy to draft or outline an invitation for you.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

HAVE you a "gesture"? If not, GET one, immediately—or you will be as out-of-date as a last week's newspaper!

Nearly everything one does is a "gesture," these days, from wearing a monocle to shooting your husband.

With some women, smoking is a gesture—and with nearly all men love-making is a gesture, when it isn't a jest.

• • •

A girl doesn't marry the man she really wants, but the one who will make her marriage the most dramatic "gesture," the butler, the life-guard or the traffic cop; the one who will give her the most publicity—or the most money with which to cut a glittering figure.

• • •

A man doesn't pick out the woman who will make him happiest—but the one who will make the best "show-window," the most ornamental and expensive-looking thing he can find.

• • •

A woman doesn't wear her hair in the most becoming or the most comfortable fashion, but in the most grotesque and eccentric fashion—the one which will attract the most attention, and cause the most sensation.

• • •

The average woman doesn't abbreviate her skirts because she is naturally shameless or even because she is vain of her knees, but "just as a gesture," to catch the masculine eye—and put it OUT!

• • •

No woman chooses her clothes because they are beautiful, graceful or artistic, any more; she picks out the most bizarre, the most exotic, the most hideous things she can find—and consoles herself that she is "different."

• • •

"Be startling! Get in the limelight! Knock 'em dead!" These are the slogans of the day. Do ANYTHING—except the normal, the natural, or the expected

Even "petting" is a gesture, with most girls. Men will never believe it; but any normal girl hates to be mauled or kissed by any man, with whom she is not at least temporarily a little bit in love. Honestly, it isn't a BIT thrilling to have a bristly cheek rubbed against yours—unless it is the cheek you love to touch. But, not to appear to be a "wild woman" would be to miss a "gesture!"

Free to Asthma and Hay Fever Sufferers

Free Trial of Method That Anyone Can Use Without Discomfort or Loss of Time.

We have a method for the control of Asthma, and we want you to try it at our expense. No matter whether your case is of long standing or recent development, whether it is present as Chronic Asthma or Hay Fever, you should send for a free Trial of our method. No matter in what climate you live, no matter what your age or occupation, if you are troubled with Asthma or Hay Fever, our method should relieve you promptly.

We especially want to send it to those apparently hopeless cases, where all forms of inhalers, douches, opium preparations, fumes, "patent smokes," etc., have failed. We want to show everyone at our expense, that our method is designed to end all difficult breathing, all wheezing, and all those terrible paroxysms.

This free offer is too important to neglect a single day. Write now and begin the method at once. Send no money. Simply mail coupon below. Do it Today—you even do not pay postage.

Here's the Way to Heal Rupture

A Marvelous Self-Home-Treatment That Anyone Can Use on Any Rupture, Large or Small

Costs Nothing to Try

Ruptured people all over the country are amazed at the almost miraculous results of a simple Method for rupture that is being sent free to all who write for it. This remarkable Rupture System is one of the greatest blessings ever offered to ruptured men, women and children. It is being pronounced the most successful Method ever discovered, and makes the use of trusses or supports unnecessary.

No matter how bad the rupture, how long you have had it, or how hard to hold; no matter how many kinds of trusses you have worn, let nothing prevent you from getting this FREE TREATMENT. Whether you think you are past help or have a rupture as large as your fists, this marvelous System will so control it and keep it up inside as to surprise you with its magic influence. It will so help you restore the parts where the rupture comes through that soon you will be as free to work at any occupation as though you had never been ruptured.

You can have a free trial of this wonderful strengthening preparation by merely sending your name and address to W. A. COLLINGS, Inc., 47D Collings Building, Watertown, N. Y. Send no money. The trial is free. Write now—today. It may save the wearing of a truss the rest of your life.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I went with a young man about six months. He said he loved me and asked me to marry him.

A couple of weeks later I went away for a few days. I wrote him every day. He got peeved because I told him to write often.

When he meets me on the street he merely greets me with "Hello!"

Does he love me? Will you please give me some advice as to whether I should stay at home and not keep company with any other young men? Or shall I really enjoy myself? I think the world of him.

BROKEN-HEARTED BABE.

EVIDENTLY the young man does not take his engagement to marry you seriously. If I were you I would have a talk with him and offer to release him from an engagement which obviously means little to him.

Then go ahead as you suggest in your letter, and enjoy the companionship of all your friends, both girls and young men.

FALL RIVER POLICE CHIEF DISAGREES WITH MAYOR

Fall River, Oct. 7.—In reply to a letter just received from Ben Miller of Boston, district organizer for the Workers' Party of America, Chief of Police Martin Feeney wrote Mr. Miller that the law and ordinances would be enforced in Fall River.

Chief Feeney contends that he has the authority under the city ordinances to prevent street meetings, while Mayor Edmond P. Talbot, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, recently wrote Mr. Miller that there is no such ordinance in Fall River.

GIRL AUTO VICTIM GETS $2,500 VERDICT

Dorothy Gauvin, 16, of Waterbury, Conn., was awarded $2,500 by a jury in the Federal Court for injuries which she received when hit by an auto, which, it was alleged, was driven by Leo J. Myer, an instructor of Clark University, who resides in Framingham. Miss Gauvin alleged that she was struck by Myer's machine while crossing a street in Waterbury, Aug. 22, 1925. She brought suit for $30,000, claiming that she has received a broken collarbone and an impairment of her nervous system.

A Battleship on Land

More Useful Than the Out-of-Date Ocean Battleship

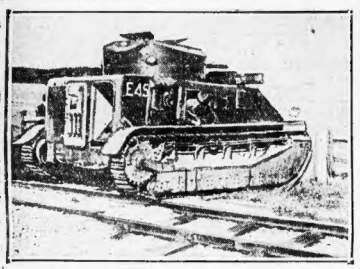
YOU WILL SEE THIS IN THE NEXT WAR. A GIANT TANK CARRYING HEAVY GUNS LIKE A BATTLESHIP, TRAVELING ACROSS FIELDS AND DITCHES

Battleships on the water are practically out of date in modern war.

A nation like England with great commercial fleets keeps fighting ships afloat to protect and convoy her merchantmen. But that won't last long.

The real danger is in the AIR. If the British want to protect their heavily laden ships on water, they will have to send out swift airships to protect them and to keep away attack. The great merchant ships may carry their own air defenders.

The picture at the top of the column shows the modern land "battleship," which will be an armored tank, able to cross fields, knock down walls and fences, rolling over ditches, over RAILROAD TRACKS AND SUCH OBSTRUCTIONS, as you see in the picture below.



HOW TANKS CROSS OPEN COUNTRY

This tank in which the British take such pride is, like the flying machine, AN AMERICAN INVENTION, the "caterpillar tractor," first extensively manufactured by Holt in California.

These things we need:

TANKS for land fighting, when it may be necessary.

A fleet of HIGH-POWERED AUTOMOBILES to carry soldiers swiftly all over the country;

AIRSHIPS of every kind, from heavy bombers to swift pursuit planes,

And SUBMARINES to meet, with their torpedoes, any ships coming against us—such is the equipment that we need.

We have the automobiles, heaven knows, twenty-two millions of them, in this country. The Government could commandeer them at any time. We have SOME tanks, but need more. We have a few submarines, but ought to have ten times as many, and much bigger ones.

As regards the fighting air fleet, Uncle Sam with all his millions is as helpless as a lop-eared rabbit when a couple of eagles pounce down on it. He may regret that, some day.

'There Are Ladies Present'

And in 1926, Mister, They REMAIN, at PUBLIC Hearings, as Is Clearly Their Right

Is there a "shockable" sex?

If so, which in your opinion is it?

An industrious Wakefield reporter tags one of the sexes as "shockable," in a five-column report of the trial of a policeman which has the whole town talking, but falls short of making the adjective stick.

One of the five charges against the accused patrolman was that he had used naughty language in public.

A former brother policeman took the stand, before the Board of Selectmen, and testified that he had overheard.

Asked to repeat the language, the witness looked appealingly at the jury. "I will," he said, "if you will give the ladies a chance to slip out."

Chairman Whitney announced that any woman not wishing to hear the testimony would be given time to leave.

The males standing about the hall and wishing for a chance to sit down were disappointed. There were no seats vacated. Not a member of the shockable sex left.

The witness repeated what he had heard.

It will not be printed.

A little gasp ran over the audience.

World Series contests are only for the great cities and, alas! not for all of them. "Title" bouts, too, demand a "big gate," a "good press," superior transportation facilities.

Wakefield, big enough to be a city but smart enough to remain a town and retain the Town Meeting, makes the best of whatever in the way of circus the fates may send along. This trial of a policeman, beginning at 8 p. m. and continuing until 2:23 g. m., drew a "house" of 1,200, of whom 1,000 remained to the end.

It was a big night in the famous rattan town, 10 miles north of our own police headquarters, but unless you consider the 3-2 vote of the Board of Selectmen, stripping the buttons from the alleged offender and taking away his badge and billy, it failed to show that there is any great difference between the sexes in their desire to hear not only the truth but the "whole truth."

FOODLESS WORLD? NOT JUST YET

By DR. FRANK CRANE

EVERY once in a while some scientific prophet announces that the food in this world is about to run out.

Malthus maintained that while the population grew in geometrical proportion, the food supply grew in arithmetical proportion, and consequently there would soon not be food enough to supply all the people.

And now comes Sir Daniel Hall, who tells the British Scientific Association that we are verging toward a wheatless world. While our population is increasing at the rate of five million yearly, the wheat-producing lands have been about exhausted.

In spite of vast irrigation schemes and other attempts to cultivate poor land, the wheat supply is running short. In many countries there has actually been a shrinkage since the war.

The number of white peoples is still growing, but where, he asks, is the land that will support them?

He says also that the world is eventually all going to turn to prohibition in order to save the grain used in the manufacture of alcoholic beverages.

He adds the interesting remark that the race which cuts out meat and alcohol in order to multiply will become a permanent slave type like worker bees.

All this is based upon the fact that mankind's fate is linked up with its wheat production.

The eating of wheat products, however, is largely habit. Other foods just as nourishing can take the place of wheat.

The edge of the tropics, for instance, has only been used for bananas, and the American peanut is very nourishing.

There is no doubt that the ingenuity of man will discover some other form of nutriment if his wheat supply be exhausted.

It is only a comparatively short time ago that the potato and tomato came into use for general consumption, and now potatoes form a considerable proportion of the world's food supply.

DEVOTE WORKING HOURS TO THE DUTY AT HAND

Are you losing confidence in yourself?
You don't know why unless it be the number of errors you make.
Errors, which show lack of concentration, stagger you at times.
You try to work too fast, plan too much ahead, while you plunge into the thing at hand with too little thought.
You don't time "ur thought right.
Instead of thinking of the future in detail before it comes, why do you not plan the detail of the matter nearest in point of time and look at the future in the big way?
But no, you must plan the future in minute detail.
Your sense of order and fitness is at fault.
You don't get things in the place of their relative importance.
You day dream and build air castles but you are not there with the goods when it is time for you to make the important move that reaches the goal.
While engaged in your daily job give it your full time and attention.
In a general way look to the future, rounding up in detail as the time approaches.
Circumstances might change the detail you try to supply so far ahead.

Odds and Ends of the Town

Don't burden others with your troubles. Most people have too many of their own to be interested in yours. If you can't broadcast joy remain silent.

A REMARKABLE SCORE

TO fill the role of agent for the AMERICAN EXPRESS COMPANY at CAMP DEVENS throughout the WORLD WAR and not have a claim entered for a lost shipment, was the record made by WALTER SPRAGUE, agent at AYER. WALTER was chairman of the BOARD OF SELECTMEN at AYER in the stirring days in addition to his arduous duties at camp. Efficiency is Walter's middle name.

CUE MISSES FIRE.

MAYOR EDWARD W. QUINN of CAMBRIDGE almost met an historical Waterloo at the dedication of the parochial school of ST. FRANCIS of the ASSISI CHURCH in EAST CAMBRIDGE. In much demand as a speaker, "ED" seldom has time to prepare a speech. He l'ves to be third or fourth on the list, so as to "get the feel" from other speakers. "ED'S" cue missed fire on this occasion. Seven speakers preceded him. They all spoke in Italian, but HIS HONOR was equal to the emergency. Guests may become through, as always, with flying colors.

"THE BUILDER" POPULAR

MRS. JOHN FRATT WHITMAN of QUINCY, has gone to CAMDEN, N. J., to supervise the production of her latest Bible play, "THE BUILDER." Church and civic agencies there selected MRS. WHITMAN'S play as the most appropriate form of "house-warming" for the imposing new auditorium located near the bridge recently constructed across the Delaware river. Ministers of CAMDEN will play the leading roles. Bible plays in which MRS. WHITMAN and her husband, a former newspaper man, collaborated, have been presented by them in church circles in various ports of this country and abroad.

A DIRE MYSTERY

"What ter ——?" gasped the expressman, remembering where he was just in time. "It's alive."

"M-m-m-ma!"

Stifled sobs and moans followed the rude turn of the box and the last twist that placed it face up brought forth a very distinct chorus of "Ma-mas."

"Oh, h——, I mean shucks," said the express juggler, "Nothin' but a bunch of mama dolls!"

And that's what they were, sent by sympathizers to the GREATER BOSTON FEDERATION OF CHURCHES to be dressed by children in Boston and added to the 200,000 to be shipped to the Orient in December for children in JAPAN.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ALICE wants to "improve her line." Alice is a high school girl, but her problem bothers many of us who are long past high school age. Here's her letter:

Dear Elsie:

I am a high school girl and I do want to improve my line! But how? I want to be able to talk high brow stuff and yet be able to give a snappy repartee.

When introduced to some collegiate, I can't ask him his view of the Darwinian theory, yet, if the occasion rises I want to discuss such things easily.

What can I do? ALICE.

You've felt that way, too, haven't you, Pal?

Many a time you've envied the men and women with the "popular line of gab." You've hated them a little, too—feeling that it was unfair that life should be made pleasant and exciting for people simply because they have an easy flow of chatter.

You can't talk like that. You can't grab the spotlight and proceed to show what a wise guy you are—or dazzle people with your flattery. And yet you know in your own heart that you're not a dumbbell. You have read a lot of good books—probably more than they have. You have your own opinions of things. And they seem to you much more sensible than the frothy ideas of these hot air artists. But somehow you can't put them into words. So you sit around like a bump on a log, growing more sour on life every minute.

Here's How to Improve

Yes, you know how little Alice feels as she looks at the Great, Big, Wonderful Collegiates and longs to dazzle them. Then suppose you listen in on my advice. Perhaps it will help you, too.

How can you improve your line, Alice?

I wondered that same thing when I was a high school girl. I used to sit around in an agony of dumbness and confusion, imagining how it would seem to be the focus of all interest and admiration. I'd have dreams about being myself as a lovely sophisticated lady with a "salon." I had read about salons somewhere—and how all the Bulging Foreheads gathered there and tossed bon mots around as a juggler tosses balls. I didn't know what bon mots were, really, but they sounded witty. Of course, I didn't have any hopes of ever owning a salon, though I liked to think about it. In the meantime, my cup of joy would be filled if I could vamp a certain Football Hero whom I loved with one of these Undying Devotions which you get every few months when you're a seventeen-year-old kid.

So I decided on a line that would produce the result.

I read the Rubaiyat—that's one of the regular symptoms. Got so I could almost say it by heart. Went in heavily for Bacon's and Emerson's essays. Memorized several good bits out of Marcus Aurelius and Robert Louis Stevenson. That, I thought, should suffice for the classics. Then I absorbed large sections of our snappiest literature. I felt it would be necessary to impress my Hero with my current sophistication.

brushed up a bit on sports. This done, I felt that I was ready for any social encounter.

Turns on "Her Line"

The next time I met my Hero I started in. Turned on the reel and cut it came—bits from Omar, saucy scraps from the snappy stuff, wise cracks about prize fighting and football.

I didn't flounder or hesitate, not for one second. I turned on the conversation just like a fire hose. I felt I was making a tremendous impression. And I was. I have never seen a young man fade so quickly and completely from the landscape as did my friend. Nor was I ever able to engage him in conversation again—not if he saw me coming.

This did not discourage me, however. I felt that the system was right, even if it hadn't worked on Herbert. So I went right on stuffing myself with facts, gathering bang-up bunches of repartee, improving my line. I soon gained the reputation of being the keenest talker in our set. This continued throughout high school and for many years thereafter. But did it get me anywhere?

No, sister, it did not!

People listened to me with a sort of dazed interest, but it was an interest that left me cold. They didn't get friendly afterwards. They didn't come to me with their troubles or try to help me with mine. I could vamp their ear drums, but I couldn't reach their hearts.

And slowly I began to see where I had failed. Life, after all, wasn't a question of words, however brilliantly arranged. Life was made of dreams and terror—sudden, sweet hope — loneliness—shame — stupidity —tears—tempers—ambition—all the hidden, tangled stuff of the emotions. And the gift which people really cared was a friendliness that would help them untangle that stuff, smooth out its kinks, glorify it commonness. That was what life meant to me. I didn't want people's words. I wanted themselves. If it meant that to me, it probably meant the same thing to other folks.

So I started giving myself. And at last people let me into their hearts. I had "improved my line."

ORIGIN OF SPECIES

By Garrett P. Serviss,

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

ANOTHER revolution in science is forecast. It affects biology, and has been likened to that which was brought about by the discovery of the complex nature of the atom. Just as the general reader had to get acquainted with the electrons not many years ago, so now he is invited to "know" the mitochondria.

The mitochondria found in the cells, are bacteria-like bodies which seem to be the ultimate units of living matter, somewhat as the electrons are the ultimate units of crude matter. Of course the comparison must not be driven too far, for the functions of these two most minute of known entities are in detail widely different.

The immensely interesting suggestion is offered that the action of the mitochondria in the cell may lie at the basis of the origin of species.

Dr. Ivan E. Wallin, of the School of Medicine in the University of Colorado, who has been engaged during seven years in special investigations of the nature of mitochondria, gives in Science a preliminary statement concerning this remarkable "revolutionary conception of the cell." Having shown the "living bacterial nature of mitochondria," he says:

"Briefly stated, micro-organisms unite with higher forms of life. In many such associations, new tissues and new organs develop in response to the microbic invasion. Some of the 'symbiotic' micro-organisms persist as mitochondria in the cell.

"The mitochondria are responsible for the specific activity of the cell. These demonstrable facts can lead to no conclusion other than symbiontiicm, or the development of bacterial 'symbioses,' is a fundamental factor in the origin of species."

We must forgive the addition to our already dangerously overloaded dictionaries of all these "symbisms" and their interminable line of relatives distinterred from linguistic cemeteries and provided with new souls, for the sake of the fresh ideas that it is their task to conserve. The biologists, however, are not alone in piling up neologisms.

In illustration of the development of new organs in response to microbio activity, Dr. Wallin makes the extremely interesting statement that "in the firefly and the squid luminiferous bacterial symbionts are apparently responsible for the development of 'light organs' in which a number of tissues become modified in response to the bacterial invasion."

How far this novel line of attack upon the great problem of the origin of the species, which has been so dramatically presented before the public mind during a few years past, may be carried can not at present be predicted.
